Felice A Travelogue:

Felice: a Travelogue Robert Harlow, 2002-01-18 Felice Gentry just recovered from a hysterectomy is told by her celebratory husband that he's booked a trip that will take them to Poland for a visit with friends in the Canadian Embassy there. After that they will tour Europe. He will close his dental practice down for a couple of months and they will leave their university-age daughter to house-sit. Dutiful wife Felice says yes although reluctantly. She is persuaded to give in only because old friends Ben and Beth Collison will host their stay behind the Iron Curtain. She and husband Ray pick up their visas in Montreal and on the day before they board the Polish liner that will take them to London and then Gdynia they go to have a look at the ship in its berth. There Felice sees a strange sight: a woman squatting suddenly to urinate beside a van in the parking garage. The woman's husband sits on the nearby curb, hardly bothering to notice. On the ship the woman appears again. She has dyed black hair, a ruined face, does not speak to other passengers and during the whole voyage 16 days including a stop in London wears the same shiny black dress patterned with large yellow flowers. Among the people at Felice and Ray's table in the ship's dining room is a professor of Slav Studies from Ottawa who knows a good deal about Poland. Felice does not know that she will meet her as well as the urinating woman after the voyage to Gdynia is done. When the ship leaves London a third woman of significance to Felice's adventure appears. Felice thinks she is Brittany who along with her twin sister Pam was sent from England at the beginning of WWII forty years ago now to live with cousins of their mother, an older couple who lived next door to Felice when her name was Phyllis in Medicine Hat, Alberta. A year older than Felice they were different from Prairie folk. They had lovely accents and lived in a fantasy world of What If that also included Felice. But the woman does not answer to Brittany and merely smiles graciously at Felice who feels dismissed but still curious. Ben Collison meets the ship and drives them in his VW Rabbit to his embassy home in Warsaw. This is a new posting for him and for the moment he lives alone, looked after by a daily housekeeper, Pani Irena. His wife Beth and their children are not due to arrive until Ben is better settled. His plans for his guests include going first to Warsaw Old Town and later on down to Krakov in the south of the country. One afternoon on the ship Felice saw a documentary about the rebirth of Warsaw from out of the rubble left behind by the Germans, rebuilt brick by brick by people who did not have enough to eat but whose love for country and city and Old Town was bigger than the need for food. She watched old women and men dressed in tatters move bricks and stones to reconstruct precious buildings again. Not Communist propaganda, this was a look into the Polish heart and mind. She wept. Now in Old Town she weeps again but there is the beginning of something else: an unaccustomed anger that would begin her personal transformation. Near the centre of Old Town there is a free cinema where a film of the rise and fall and rise again of Old Town is shown in a number of languages. When she passes by she is told that the next showing is in German. Stunned she asks how Germans could show themselves here after what they did to Warsaw. The ticket taker shrugs. During a trip to Krakov Ben turns off the highway and takes them to Auschwitz, a place he is curious to see. Here Felice's mind and senses almost immediately begin to be assaulted by strange sights Ben opts to see the Holocaust film that plays continuously at the cinema just inside the reception centre Ray won't let Felice go into the camp alone He follows her his camera constantly at his eye to prevent him from seeing too much At the gate to the main camp Felice buys a book written by a German who was a guard here during the Felice Robert Harlow, 1985 Words We Call Home Linda Svendsen, 2011-11-01 This is the 25th anniversary going on 44th of an opportunity of Earle Birney's sanctuary for creative writers We at the gate of the stockade follow the migrations of the creatures imagined into life outside and it is best that I do as we always have let the gate swing open to let the curiosity roam so that you can see some of those that came down through the years to drink at UBC and then move on Each of us has our favourites you will find yours George McWhirter from the Introduction Words We Call Home is a commemorative anthology celebrating more than twenty five years of achievement for the UBC Creative Writing department the oldest writing program in Canada The more than sixty poets dramatists and fiction writers included provide just a sample of the energy and vision the department has fostered over the years From Earle Birney's pioneering efforts in 1946 to the birth of the department in 1965 to the present day the programme has created a place for aspiring talented writers That it has succeeded is evidenced by the numerous authors who have received Governor General Awards Commonwealth Poetry Prizes CBC Prizes for Poetry and other distinguished awards Words We Call Home is a collection of work that will hold a special place in the hearts of those who have watched UBC grow and flourish over the years and of everyone who loves literature My Journey Donna Karan, 2015-10-13 NAMED ONE OF THE BEST BOOKS OF THE YEAR BY HARPER'S BAZAAR In this candid memoir featuring a foreword by Barbra Streisand renowned designer Donna Karan shares intimate details about her lonely childhood her four plus decades in the fashion industry her two marriages motherhood and her ongoing quest for self acceptance and spiritual peace Donna Karan was born into the fashion business her father was a tailor and her mother was a showroom model and Seventh Avenue saleswoman yet Karan dreamed of becoming a dancer like Martha Graham or a singer like Barbra Streisand Fashion was her destiny though My Journey traces Karan's early days as an intern at Anne Klein the creation of her Seven Easy Pieces which forever changed the way working women dressed and the meteoric rise of her company Along with juicy industry stories Karan candidly discusses her difficult mother and traumatic childhood her turbulent romantic life all the loved ones she has lost over the years and the personal awakening that occurred just as she reached the height of professional and financial success That awakening set Karan down a path of spiritual discovery and self improvement From est to Kabbalah from silent retreats to leech therapy Karan tried everything to find as she writes calm in the chaos But she also reveals how a chaotic life fueled by endless curiosity and childlike impulses helped her design seminal collections season after season for global powerhouse brands Donna Karan New York and DKNY She also details how she has channeled her creativity and her urge to solve problems and nurture others into philanthropic work particularly her early outspoken advocacy for AIDS awareness and research and the
