Reimagining Communication in a Post-pandemic World: The Intersection of Information, Media Technology, and Psychology Runxi Zeng,Hichang Cho,Richard David Evans,Anfan Chen,2023-04-05 The COVID 19 pandemic has dramatically changed social interactions Social distancing policies lockdowns and mandatory quarantines have accelerated the technological mediation of communication e g AI mediated communication computer mediated communication on an unprecedented scale willingly or otherwise Many physical activities such as office work education and conferences have had to be performed in the online space through social media apps the metaverse or specialized programs on mobile phones or laptops as part of pandemic control efforts As a result digitally mediated channels have become critical for information acquisition and communication across a wide spectrum of human activities such as education social interaction entertainment and commercial activities Human beings are increasingly reliant on non human agents including social media Artificial Intelligence AI powered tools or smartphone mobile devices for most routine activities professional communication and social interactions As scientific understanding of COVID 19 improves pandemic restrictions are gradually loosening However it remains to be seen whether the pandemic communication paradigm characterized by heavy technological mediation and reliance on non human agents will also gradually decline or will the paradigm shift become deeply entrenched with further acceleration of dependency on technological mediation and non human agents

The Rise of the President's Permanent Campaign Brendan J. Doherty, 2012-08-21 While the presidency has always been a political office the distinction between campaigning and governing has become increasingly blurred in recent years Yet no one until now has documented the phenomenon of the permanent campaign and analyzed its impact on the executive office In this eye opening book Brendan Doherty provides empirical evidence of the growing focus by American presidents on electoral concerns throughout their terms in office clearly demonstrating that we can no longer assume that the time a president spends campaigning for reelection can be separated from the time he spends governing To track the evolving relationship between campaigning and governing Doherty examines the strategic choices that presidents make and what those choices reveal about presidential priorities He focuses on the rise in presidential fundraising and the targeting of key electoral states throughout a president's term in office illustrating that recent presidents have disproportionately visited those states that are important to their political prospects while largely neglecting those without electoral payoff He also shows how decisions about electoral matters previously made by party officials are now made by voter conscious operatives within the White House Doherty analyzes what these changing dynamics portend for the nature of presidential leadership contending that while such strategies can at times strengthen a president's hand they can also undermine his role as a unifying national leader heighten public cynicism and limit prospects for bipartisan compromise He further shows how trends in presidential fundraising undermine the conventional understanding of the predatory relationship between the president and his party Drawing on new systematic evidence of presidential fundraising and travel archival research at presidential libraries and accounts by presidents and their aides Doherty musters a mountain of evidence to offer an objective comprehensive argument about the causes indicators and implications of the rise of the permanent campaign as no previous book has done an evenhanded account that seeks to disparage no individual president Concise and accessible The Rise of the President's Permanent Campaign engages crucially important questions about the development of the presidency as well as larger normative questions about what we want in a leader as it challenges the convention in political science that has long kept most scholarship on presidential campaigns separate from the study of the presidency itself
