of the Trapper Agnes Christina Laut, 1902-01-01 Fearing nothing stopping at nothing knowing no law ruling his stronghold of the wilds like a despot checkmating rivals with a deviltry that beggars parallel wassailing with a shamelessness that might have put Rome's worst deeds to the blush fighting fighting fighting always fighting with a courage that knew no truce but victory the American trapper must ever stand as a type of the worst and the best in the militant heroes of mankind Each with an army at his back Wolfe and Napoleon won victories that upset the geography of earth The fur traders never at any time exceeded a few thousands in number faced enemies unbacked by armies and sallied out singly or in pairs yet they won a continent that has bred a new race Like John Colter whom Manuel Lisa met coming from the wilds a hundred years ago the trapper strapped a pack to his back slung a rifle over his shoulder and without any fanfare of trumpets stepped into the pathless shade of the great forests Or else like Williams of the Arkansas the trapper left the moorings of civilization in a canoe hunted at night hid himself by day evaded hostile Indians by sliding down stream with muffled paddles slept in mid current screened by the branches of driftwood and if a sudden halloo of marauders came from the distance cut the strap that held his craft to the shore and got away under cover of the floating tree Hunters crossing the Cimarron desert set out with pack horses and like Captain Becknell's party were often compelled to kill horses and dogs to keep from dying of thirst Frequently their fate was that of Rocky Mountain Smith killed by the Indians as he stooped to scoop out a drinking hole in the sand Men who brought down their pelts to the mountain rendezvous of Pierre's Hole or went over the divide like Fraser and Thompson of the North West Fur Company had to abandon both horses and canoes scaling cañon walls where the current was too turbulent for a canoe and the precipice too sheer for a horse with the aid of their hunting knives stuck in to the haft Where the difficulties were too great for a few men the fur traders clubbed together under a master mind like John Jacob Astor of the Pacific Company or Sir Alexander MacKenzie of the Nor Westers Banded together they thought no more of coasting round the sheeted antarctics or slipping down the ice jammed current of the MacKenzie River under the midnight sun of the arctic circle than people to day think of running from New York to Newport When the conflict of 1812 cut off communication between western fur posts and New York by the overland route Farnham the Green Mountain boy didn't think himself a hero at all for sailing to Kamtchatka and crossing the whole width of Asia Europe and the Atlantic to reach Mr Astor The American fur trader knew only one rule of existence to go ahead without any heroics whether the going cost his own or some other man's life That is the way the wilderness was won and the winning is one of the most thrilling pages in history The Encyclopedia of North American Indian Wars, 1607-1890 Bloomsbury Publishing, 2011-09-19 This encyclopedia provides a broad in depth and multidisciplinary look at the causes and effects of warfare between whites and Native Americans encompassing nearly three centuries of history The Battle of the Wabash the U S Army's single worst defeat at the hands of Native American forces The Battle of Wounded Knee an unfortunate unplanned event that resulted in the deaths of more than 150 Lakota Sioux men women and children These and other engagements between white settlers and Native Americans were events of profound historical significance resulting in social political and cultural changes for both ethnic populations the lasting effects of which are clearly seen today The Encyclopedia of North American Indian Wars 1607 1890 A Political Social and Military History provides comprehensive coverage of almost 300 years of North American Indian Wars Beginning with the first Indian settler conflicts that arose in the early 1600s this three volume work covers all noteworthy battles between whites and Native Americans through the Battle of Wounded Knee in December 1890 The book provides detailed biographies of military social religious and political leaders and covers the social and cultural aspects of the Indian wars Also supplied are essays on every major tribe as well as all significant battles skirmishes and treaties North American Fauna ,1969 Forest Plans of North America Jacek P.
