Recharacterizing Restructuring Kerry Rittich,2002-10-16 In the last decade market centered economic reforms have been implemented in a wide range of developing and transitional countries under the auspices of the international financial institutions Whether or not they deliver the promised prosperity they appear to be associated with widening economic inequality as well as disadvantage for particular social groups among them women and workers Recharacterizing Restructuring argues that such effects are neither temporary nor accidental Instead efforts to promote growth through greater efficiency inevitably engage distributive concerns Change in the status of different groups is connected to the process of legal and institutional reform Part I analyzes the place of law and institutional reform in current economic restructuring policies Through post realist legal analysis and institutional economics it discusses the role of background legal rules in the allocation of resources and power among different groups Part II traces how disadvantage might result for women in the course of economic reform through an analysis of the World Bank s proposals for states in transition from plan to market economies It considers such foundational issues as the place of unpaid work in economic activity as well as the gendered nature of proposals to re organize productive activity and the role of the state

The Stratified State: Radical Institutional Theories of Participation and Duality William M. Dugger,William T. Waller Jr,2019-07-26 These essays in the purest tradition of political economy consider three major themes from the multiple relationships between the state and the economy duality myth and crisis The state is a complex mix of dualisms the welfare versus the warfare state the agency of both social integration and exploitation and public versus private institutions The editors aim to distinguish true from false dualisms Myths in modern society are important as they enables whites to dominate blacks men to dominate women warplanners to dominate peacemakers the rich to dominate the poor The editors consider the myth that the state and the market are separate the state as a single monolithic structure and that we can all identify and share in a national interest The crisis of the state is the third major theme The state is in crisis because we have no fully developed theory of the state because its welfare and warfare functions are undergoing profound change The essays are all written from the point of view of radical institutionalism and emphasise the need for increased participation in the policymaking and policy evaluating processes of the state

Gezahagn Kudama,2019-12-04 Document from the year 2019 in the subject Economics Other grade University Wollega University language English abstract Several people imagine that economics is about money In fact this is true to some extent this is true since economics has a lot to do with money with how much money people are paid how much they spend what it costs to buy various items how much money firms earn how much money there is in total in the economy Even if the large number of areas in which our lives are concerned with money economics is more than just the study of money Sloman 2006 In general the subject matter of economics is generally divided into four parts They are Production Consumption Exchange and Distribution Production means producing things or creation or addition of utilities to the goods and services to make them capable of satisfying various wants Consumption deals with human wants and their satisfaction Exchange refers to transfer of goods and services through the medium of money Finally distribution refers to the sharing of income from production by four factors of production namely land labor capital and organization Sloman 2006

Human Progress Amid Resistance to Change Joseph E. Pluta,2011-04 In building their profession around carefully selected interpretations of the work of Adam Smith Alfred Marshall and others mainstream economists have embraced such concepts as the invisible hand equilibrium consumer rationality the marginal productivity theory the inevitability of diminishing returns and the fiction of pure competition In contrast the evolutionary economics of Thorstein Veblen and Clarence Ayres challenges all of these concept as unproven and capable of telling us little or nothing about the actual operation of the economy Using the evolutionary framework Human Progress Amid Resistance to Change argues that all cultures since prehistory have faced two opposing forces technology including human knowledge and institutions rooted in ceremonialism The former is dynamic forward looking accepting of change cumulative one discovery builds on another and the major cause of human progress The latter is static and consists of all customs traditions superstitions rituals ceremonies taboos and past binding religious beliefs that resist change The book illustrates in detail how these competing forces have interacted throughout the history of the human race and how mainstream economics fails to grasp the significance of their combined effects
