Footplate Days On The Southern:

Footplate Days on the Southern H. Norman, 1983 Harold Gasson's Steam Days Harold Gasson, 2020-12-12 When Harold Gasson first put pen to paper more than forty years ago it was at a time when there was a growing resurgence of interest in the steam railway Three of his books described his life as a fireman based at Didcot shed from the early 1940s Firing Days was followed by Footplate Days and then Nostalgia Days Finally after Harold had forsaken the footplate for the signal box came the final instalment Signalling Days All were eagerly sought after at the time for they described the railway readers wanted to hear about providing a nostalgic perspective which could be enjoyed from the comfort of one s arm chair Out of print for several decades all four books have now been reprinted and are available together for the first time complete with a new set of illustrations The steam engines and most of the mechanical signal boxes of Harold s working days may have been long consigned to history but in these well written and enjoyable books they are brought vividly back to life for a new audience to enjoy as well for those who recall his era for whom these tales will reawaken treasured memories Southern Railway, Lord Nelson Class 4-6-0s Tim Hillier-Graves, 2020-09-19 The Lord Nelson Class has come to be viewed as an also ran amongst express locomotives and is largely overlooked for that reason It had the misfortune to be sandwiched on Southern metals between the classic and much revered King Arthurs and Schools and by Bullied s controversial Pacifics In such company any design might suffer by comparison And yet when first appearing they attracted plaudits from railway professionals including the footplate crew and the public alike But with only 16 being built their impact was muted and any faults in their design were magnified beyond their actual impact In truth they deserved far better than this and were in fact sturdy reliable performers that served the company well on the heavy boat trains for which they were designed and across their other passenger services for 30 years and more in peace and war Much has been written about these locomotives but no story is ever complete with new information and photographs emerging to deepen our understanding of them This book provides an in depth view that re examines these impressive engines using new material eye witness accounts contemporary assessments and more than 200 photographs and drawings The Railway Magazine ,1908 The Modified Bulleid Pacifics Tim Hillier-Graves, 2019-06-30 This British Railways history recounts the life of a controversial steam engine and its miraculous transformation at the hands of a brilliant engineer As Chief Mechanical Engineer of the Southern Railway Oliver Bulleid designed what were perhaps the most controversial steam locomotives ever built in Britain the Pacifics Loved and loathed in equal measure the debate over their strengths and weaknesses took on a new dimension when British Railways decided to modify them in the 1950s When noted engineer Ron Jarvis was charged with improving on Bulleid s designs he displayed a master s touch saving the best of Bulleid s work while incorporating other established design principles What emerged was described by Bert Spencer Gresley s talented assistant as taking a swan and creating a soaring eagle This book explores all the elements of the lives of these Pacifics and their two designers It draws on previously unpublished material to describe their gradual evolution which didn't start or finish with the 1950s major rebuilding program

Shed Side in South Lancashire and Cheshire Kenn Pearce, 2012-07-01

In the 1950s and 1960s south Lancashire and Cheshire was criss crossed by a web of railway lines servicing the various needs of local industries. The region was a haven for railway enthusiasts who pursued the hundreds of steam workhorses based at British Railways depots in chemical towns such as Warrington, Widnes, Wigan and Sutton Oak besides Southport and Northwich. While these facilities appeared less glamorous than larger counterparts in Liverpool or Manchester, the stories of the engines, trains and the men who were based at the depots in these towns was no less fascinating. Shed Side in South Lancashire and Cheshire provides a fascinating portrait of the daily operations of the freight and passenger trains of the region during the final decade of Britain's steam era. It evokes a period of grimy, metal clattering, smoke-filled industry and of an era forever etched in our industrial heritage.

An Historical Geography of Railways in Great Britain and Ireland David Turnock, 2016-12-05

Although a great deal has been published on the economic, social and engineering history of nineteenth century railways, the work of historical geographers has been much less conspicuous. This overview by David Turnock goes a long way towards restoring the balance. It details every important aspect of the railway's influence on spatial distribution of economic and social change, providing a full account of the nineteenth century geography of the British Isles seen in the context of the railway. The book reviews and explains the shape of the developing railway network beginning with the pre-steam railways and connections between existing road and water communications and the new rail lines. The author also discusses the impact of the railways on the patterns of industrial, urban and rural change throughout the century. Throughout the historical geography of Ireland is treated in equal detail to that of Great Britain.

Work Identity at the End of the Line? T. Strangleman, 2004-05-21

Work Identity at the End of the Line tells the story of workplace culture and identity in the railway industry before, during and after privatization in the mid-1990s. It combines rich interview material from workers and managers involved in the privatisation process with a fascinating background detail of nationalization. The book will be of interest to sociologists, cultural and economic historians as well as those studying culture change in business. Work Identity at the End of the Line has been shortlisted for the British Sociological Association's Philip Abrams Memorial Prize 2005. It is one of only four titles to be shortlisted.
