presents a wide range of writings about women's lives in the United States. Michele Plott and Lauri Umansky have drawn on their experiences as both students and professors to assemble the collection. Seeking to provide as full a sampling from a diverse and intellectually vibrant field as one volume permits, the editors have also chosen writing that makes an enjoyable read. A few of the selections here represent the undisputed classics of the field. More of them constitute simply the works drawn from academic and nonacademic sources alike that could make a difference in understanding what it means to be female in America. Making Sense of Women's Lives is intended as the primary text in Women's Studies courses. With that usage in mind, Plott and Umansky have provided brief introductions to each article to help students understand the author's perspectives. Thought and discussion questions follow each selection. The book contains, as well, numerous Flash Exercises, suggestions for class exercises and activities. The editors have used these activities in their courses over the past decade in conjunction with readings in this volume and have found that the full complement of materials coalesces into an intellectually powerful introduction to Women's Studies. A Collegiate Press book.

Conflicting Paths Harvey J. Graff, 1995. We grow up so simple it just seems to happen, and yet there are endless variations in the way we do it. What part does culture play in the process? How much do politics and economics have to do with it? As the nation has matured, have the ways people grow up changed too? This book traces the many paths to adulthood that Americans have pursued over time. Spanning more than two centuries of intense transformation in the lives of individuals and the life of a nation, Conflicting Paths is an innovative history of growing up in America. Harvey J. Graff, a distinguished social historian, mines more than five hundred personal narratives for what they can tell us about the passage from childhood to maturity. Drawing on diaries, memoirs, autobiographies, and letters, he builds a penetrating, complex, firsthand account of how childhood, adolescence, and youth have been experienced and understood as functions of familial and social relations, as products of biology and physiology, and as cultural and political constructs. These first-person testimonies cross the lines of time and space, gender, and class, ethnicity, age, and race. In these individual stories and the larger story they constitute, Graff exposes the way social change, including institutional developments and shifting attitudes, expectations, and policy, and personal experience intertwine in the process of growing up. Together, these narratives form a challenging, subtle guide to historical experiences and to the epochal remaking of growing up. The most socially inclusive and historically extensive of any such research, Graff's work constitutes an important chapter in the story of the family, the formation of modern society, and the complex interweaving of young people, tradition, and change.

The Subject of Liberty Nancy J. Hirschmann, 2009-01-10 This book reconsiders the dominant Western understandings of freedom through the lens of women's real life experiences of domestic violence welfare and Islamic veiling Nancy Hirschmann argues that the typical approach to freedom found in political philosophy severely reduces the concept's complexity which is more fully revealed by taking such practical issues into account Hirschmann begins by arguing that the dominant Western understanding of freedom does not provide a conceptual vocabulary for accurately characterizing women's experiences Often free choice is assumed when women are in fact coerced as when a battered woman who stays with her abuser out of fear or economic necessity is said to make this choice because it must not be so bad and coercion is assumed when free choices are made such as when Westerners assume that all veiled women are oppressed even though many Islamic women view veiling as an important symbol of cultural identity Understanding the contexts in which choices arise and are made is central to understanding that freedom is socially constructed through systems of power such as patriarchy capitalism and race privilege Social norms practices and language set the conditions within which choices are made determine what options are available and shape our individual subjectivity desires and self understandings Attending to the ways in which contexts construct us as subjects of liberty Hirschmann argues provides a firmer empirical and theoretical footing for understanding what freedom means and entails politically intellectually and socially
