R. New, 2013-09-13 The third in a trilogy of global overviews of conservation of diverse and ecologically important insect groups The first two were Beetles in Conservation 2010 and Hymenoptera and Conservation 2012 Each has different priorities and emphases that collectively summarise much of the progress and purpose of invertebrate conservation Much of the foundation of insect conservation has been built on concerns for Lepidoptera particularly butterflies as the most popular and best studied of all insect groups The long accepted worth of butterflies for conservation has led to elucidation of much of the current rationale of insect species conservation and to definition and management of their critical resources with attention to the intensively documented British fauna leading the world in this endeavour In Lepidoptera and Conservation various themes are treated through relevant examples and case histories and sufficient background given to enable non specialist access Intended for not only entomologists but conservation managers and naturalists due to its readable approach to the subject

Insect Biodiversity Robert G. Foottit, Peter H. Adler, 2009-03-03 Insect Biodiversity Science and Society brings together leading scientific experts to assess the impact insects have on humankind and the earth's fragile ecosystems It examines why insect biodiversity matters and how the rapid evolution of insect species is affecting us all Insects and related arthropods make up more than 50 percent of the known animal diversity globally yet a lack of knowledge about insects is hindering the advance of science and society This book explores the wide variety in type and number of insect species and their evolutionary relationships Case studies offer assessments on how insect biodiversity can help meet the needs of a rapidly expanding human population and also examine the consequences that an increased loss of insect species will have on the world The book concludes that a better understanding of the biology and ecology of insects is the only way to sustainably manage ecosystems in an ever changing global environment
