

Through the process of photosynthesis plants use sunlight which is energy to make sugar. Plants are producers which is the base of a trophic system. They convert the rest of the trophic system with energy. The first use of the ecosystem says that energy cannot be created or destroyed but can change from one form to another. 10% of energy from each trophic level gets passed onto the next trophic level which is how energy changes before. Energy flow in an ecosystem is not really ecological efficient because since only 10% of energy gets passed on that other 90% is being lost as heat, which is not efficient in its passing energy.

Primary consumers will eat the producers. For example the bunny will eat the flowers. The bunny will use the 10% of energy that gets passed on from the producers for growth, reproduction, waste, waste defense, daily maintenance. All organisms in any trophic level will use energy for these reasons, daily maintenance. Primary consumers have lots of biomass which is all the living things within a given trophic level. Biomass is the energy that gets passed onto the next trophic level.

Secondary consumers will eat primary consumers. The snake will eat the bunny. Secondary consumers are important because they keep the primary consumer population size in control. They eat them for energy.

Tertiary consumers will eat secondary consumers. The hawk will eat the snake. Tertiary consumers are the apex predator they are found at the top of the food chain. They have no predator after them, but when they die they will be broken down by decomposers. Consumers only get energy from the organisms they consume.

When an organism dies a decomposer such as bacteria or fungus will break it down and the nutrients and energy will return to the soil. That nutrients can then be recycled for producers to use.

When an organism dies a decomposer such as bacteria or fungus will break it down and the nutrients and energy will return to the soil. That nutrients can then be recycled for producers to use.
