INTRODUCTION

This overview summarizes EIFS wall construction including the advantages and disadvantages of this construction strategy. Complex two-dimensional heat flow analysis and one-dimensional hygrothermal modeling were used to determine moisture-related durability risks for analysis.

For a more complete analysis of this and other wall constructions, go to www.buildingscience.com.

THERMAL CONTROL

Installed Insulation R-value: The framed portion of this wall assembly typically has an R-value of R-19 to R-20 when insulated with fiberglass batt or cellulose. Exterior insulation for EIFS is typically EPS at R-4/inch.

Whole-wall R-value: Using two-dimensional heat flow analysis with thermal bridging effects and average framing factors demonstrates improvements in the efficiency of the fiberglass batt or cellulose in the stud space by decreasing the thermal bridging effects of the framing and the rim joint. Adding 4" of EPS insulation for a total increase of R-16 increases the whole-wall R-value of standard construction by slightly more than R-16 because of thermal bridging of the framing and rim joint. The whole-wall R-value for this system is approximately R-30.

Air Leakage Control: Fiberglass batt, blown and sprayed cellulose are all air permeable materials allowing possible air paths between the interior and exterior as well as convective looping through the material. The air tightness of an EIFS system is typically at the surface of the exterior sheathing (usually glass-faced exterior gypsum) because it is the water control layer.

Typical Insulation Products: EPS exterior insulation, fiberglass batt, blown cellulose, sprayed cellulose.
