Leadership for Change and School Reform Kathryn A. Riley, Karen Seashore Louis, 2000
School reform is a top priority for governments today
This timely and challenging book edited by leading international researchers Kathryn Riley and Karen Seashore Louis offers a rich comparative perspective on leadership for change and school reform
Contributors from North America Europe and Australia demonstrate how school leadership is influenced by global pressures differing national and state contexts and local concerns
They illustrate the limitations of reform initiatives which focus on school leaders to the exclusion of the many other organisations which affect school such as national and local governments professional associations and school communities
This book raises some important questions such as How can school leaders create intelligent thinking schools
How can leadership and learning be linked together
What are the characteristics of effective local education authorities and school districts
What is the role of teacher organisations in educational reform and change
What happens if businesses teachers parents and local communities have different views of what makes a good school
The text illustrates the ways in which leadership is rooted in learning and identifies new directions for school leadership
It challenges conventional notions of leadership offering an expanded view which sees leadership just as an individual role based function but as a network of relationships among people structures and cultures
This lively and provocative book should be read by all those interested in education reform
Democratic Leadership Thomas A. Mulkeen, Nelda H. Cambron-McCabe, Bruce J. Anderson, 1994
Almost a decade ago a national commission formally announced a time of crisis in American education
Since

then Americans have been engaged in a debate about the purpose and organization of tomorrow's schools. While the early reform reports were silent on the preparation of school administrators, recent reports have focused on the failure to turn out well-prepared administrators. The National Commission on Excellence in Educational Administration (1987) and the National Policy Board for Educational Administration (1989) called for sweeping changes in the recruitment, preparation, regulation, and evaluation of school administrators. It was argued that raising standards for admission to educational administration programs, more courses adding more rigor to existing courses, tighter certification requirements, competency-based licensing, and supervised school site internships would address the concerns raised by practitioners and numerous other critics. Educational reforms directed toward raising the quality of our schools require administrators who are collaborative, dynamic, and innovative problem solvers; administrators who can guide the educational enterprise to higher achievement; provide individuals with aspirations and dreams; and critically inculcate the young into a political democracy.

This is an interestingly eclectic selection of material on the management of change in education. Managing Schools Today. A key theme of this book is that change is not just about the creation of new policies and procedures to implement external mandates. It is also about the strategies by which individuals respond to the impact of structural and cultural change, about personal change as much as organizational change, about the place of values in framing organizational form and culture, as well as those which look at individual and group responses to the pressures which they feel. This is a companion volume to Managing the Effective School, edited by Margaret Preedy. It is the Change Processes in the Public Schools.

Richard O. Carlson, 1965. Educational Administration Robert Palestini, 2011-10-16. Newly appointed school administrators are often confused when faced with the prospect of having to assume a leadership role in a complex organization like a school or school system. Where does one start? An effective method would be to systematically examine the vital components that make up an organization. A system of organizational diagnosis and prescription will lead to a comprehensive and integrated analysis of the organization's strengths and weaknesses and point the way toward possible improvement The new edition of Educational Administration Leading with Mind and Heart suggests such a sequential and systematic approach Utilizing it effectively can produce dramatic results Handbook of Leadership and Administration for Special Education Jean B. Effective School Leadership John MacBeath, 1998-09-30 This is a zippy read arising out of the international project effective leadership in a time of change which grapples with the nature and practice of leadership as opposed to management or administration in schools Times Educational Supplement Who really runs the school head teachers or governors What do pupils think of their leaders and should they have a bigger role in school leadership Is the United Kingdom obsessed with discipline and strong leadership as others suggest Is New Public Management an insidious undermining of what is important and valuable in the UK educational system The answers to these and other questions present surprises and challenges to the way things are seen in the UK This book provides evidence from other countries that raises many questions about effective leadership and how it is seen from different viewpoints and examines the issues in a political context and in relation to a changing world scene      Change and Innovation University of Calgary.
