Book germinating seeds in eggshells, colouring eggs, making a Nowruz garland, jumping over fires, setting the Haft sinn (seven's holiday table), planting narcissus and hyacinth bulbs, selecting and buying goldfish, banging spoons for trick or treating, cooking the Nowruz dinner, enjoying the Outdoor Thirteen picnic.

From Persia to Napa Najmieh Batmanglij, 2006. Wine is seen as the natural partner of many great cuisines but few people associate it with Persian food, one of the world's most sophisticated culinary traditions. The ties in fact are age old. This book weaves together history, poetry, a look at modern viniculture and a wealth of recipes and wine pairings to celebrate the rightful relationship of wine and food on the Persian table. Whoever seeks the origins of wine must be crazy, a Persian poet once declared, implying that simple enjoyment of this greatest gift of the grape ought to be enough. Since he wrote those words, however, winemaking has been traced all the way back to the northern uplands of the Fertile Crescent some seven millennia ago, the start of a journey that would take it across the Near East and then into Europe in the dawning years of civilisation. Iran was one of the nurseries of the wine grape and as empires rose and fell, their princes, priests, poets and people in ordinary walks of life all embraced wine in various ways. After Islam came to Iran, wine drinking sometimes slipped from public view but it never disappeared. In this lavishly illustrated book, Najmieh Batmanglij explores that long and eventful history, then shifts her story to California's famed Napa Valley, half a world away. There, in a kind of up to the minute homage to the past, an Iranian American named Darioush Khaledi uses the latest vinicultural techniques to make superb wines at a winery reminiscent of Persepolis, the ceremonial capital of the ancient Persian empire. The final section of the book offers 80 recipes, a guide to Persian hospitality, both old and new, and seasonal menus for various occasions. Grapes play a role in most of the recipes, whether in the form of the fruit, the leaf, the juice, the syrup, unripe grapes or their juice, verjuice, vinegar or wine. Although these recipes are presented for the modern table, they are traditional, based on sources as various as a tenth century Persian cookbook or the culinary archives of a sixteenth century Persian court. The book has two special sections. One, written by Dick Davis, a leading authority on Persian literature, discusses the unique links between poetry and wine drinking in Persian culture. The other, by wine and food expert Burke Owens, offers guidelines for pairing wine with the distinctive ingredients used in Persian cooking. He has also provided
