Management of Shared Groundwater Resources Eran Feitelson, Marwan Haddad, 2012-12-06 Most of the world s freshwater resources in the liquid state i e not in glaciers and polar caps are underground As the population grows and demand for water rises reliance on groundwater increases In many cases the groundwater underlies boundaries or is part of a hydraulic system that crosses boundaries In such cases there is always the danger that the prisoner s dilemma will run its course and all parties will compete over who will pump the most water ultimately destroying the storage potential to the detriment of future generations of all parties reliant on the groundwater This book explores the options and means for averting this all too realistic scenario by managing these shared groundwater resources Nowhere is the likelihood of excessive use of groundwater greater than in the water scarce Middle East and especially in the Israeli Palestinian case Here both sides are heavily reliant on a shared aquifer the Mountain aquifer This book is the outcome of a seven year effort to find ways to manage the Mountain aquifer perhaps the most important resource shared by Israelis and Palestinians As part of this cooperative study four workshops were held in which a selected number of Palestinian Israeli and foreign experts were invited The chapters in this book were originally presented in one of these workshops To these papers introductory and concluding chapters were added

Managing Salinization Waltina Scheumann, 2012-12-06 Salinization of soils is a major threat to irrigated agriculture and counteracts the targets of costly public infrastructure investments In this study salinization is regarded as the outcome of an institutional arrangement which impedes the effective implementation of well known and well established control measures be they technical managerial or economic In public irrigation systems neither the management units nor the farmers are offered any incentives towards the control of high groundwater levels and salinization if the management units are embedded in a highly centralized non market institutional setting The author answers the question under which conditions management units and irrigators are active in halting and reversing the process of salinization

Bureaucracy and Development Diana Suhardiman, 2014-12-26 The fall of the New Order government in 1998 and the political reform that followed posed substantial challenges for Indonesia s bureaucracy to continue fulfilling its mandate This book analyses the process of bureaucratic reform in the irrigation sector Using Irrigation Management Transfer policy as the entry point for analysis it documents and analyses the irrigation bureaucracy s ability to sustain its power and prominence in the sector's development amidst and against national and international pressures for reform. The book argues that bureaucratic reform in the irrigation sector rather than attempting to change the bureaucracy's functioning in the image of national and global good governance perspectives and priorities should instead focus on linking the irrigation bureaucracy's everyday practice more effectively with farmers' needs and aspirations. Reform efforts of the past decades show that Indonesia's irrigation sector development cannot be redirected without the irrigation bureaucracy's knowledge, experience and cooperation and without strengthening its downward accountability to farmer irrigators. User

It provides a framework to help governments design effective water management programs. Countries can tailor the framework to suit their needs. The study describes key policy goals that each country program should adopt. It discusses ways to make industry control pollution and conserve water. It suggests means of making water more accessible and sewage collection and treatment more efficient. Practical ways to modernize irrigation techniques and hydropower systems to protect ecosystems, minimize resettlement, and maintain biodiversity are outlined. Low cost methods of providing drinking water for the rural poor and water for industry and agriculture are recommended. The study also recommends institutional and regulatory reforms that use incentives to promote more efficient water use and services, employ new water conservation technology, and let communities join in water management. The study describes the conditions that would affect World Bank lending to individual countries. It reviews the water management problems that would get urgent consideration. It also examines how Bank support is affected by a country's commitment to sound water management. A Rice Village Saga Y. Hayami, M. Kikuchi, 2000. Waves of modernizing forces such as the
