Unity in Faith? J. M. White, 2020-11-03 The little known history of an attempt to end a religious schism in imperial Russia and the questions it raised about church and state Established in 1800 edinoverie translated as unity in faith was intended to draw back those who had broken with the Russian Orthodox Church over ritual reforms in the seventeenth century Called Old Believers they had been persecuted as heretics In time the Russian state began tolerating Old Believers in order to lure them out of hiding and make use of their financial resources as a means of controlling and developing Russia's vast and heterogeneous empire However the Russian Empire was also an Orthodox state and conversion from Orthodoxy constituted a criminal act So which was better for ensuring the stability of the Russian Empire managing heterogeneity through religious toleration or enforcing homogeneity through missionary campaigns Edinoverie remained contested and controversial throughout the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries as it was distrusted by both the Orthodox Church and the Old Believers themselves The state reinforced this ambivalence using edinoverie as a means by which to monitor Old Believer communities and employing it as a carrot to the stick of prison exile and the deprivation of rights In Unity in Faith James White's study of edinoverie offers an unparalleled perspective of the complex triangular relationship between the state the Orthodox Church and religious minorities in imperial Russia
