Britain and Disarmament John R. Walker, 2016-04-15 Since the use of poison gas during the First World War and the dropping of atomic bombs on Japan at the end of the Second World War nuclear biological or chemical NBC weapons have registered high on the fears of governments and individuals alike Recognising both the particular horror of these weapons and their potential for inflicting mass death and destruction much effort has been expended in finding ways to eliminate such weapons on a multi lateral level Based on extensive official archives this book looks at how successive British governments approached the subject of control and disarmament between 1956 and 1975 This period reflects the UK's landmark decision in 1956 to abandon its offensive chemical weapons programme a decision that was reversed in 1963 but never fully implemented and ends with the internal travails over the possible use of CR tear gas in Northern Ireland Whilst the issue of nuclear arms control has been much debated the integration of biological and chemical weapons into the wider disarmament picture is much less well understood there being no clear statement by the UK authorities for much of the period under review in this book as to whether the country even possessed such weapons or had an active research and development programme Through a thorough exploration of government records the book addresses fundamental questions relating to the history of

NBC weapons programmes including the military economic and political pressures that influenced policy the degree to which the UK was a reluctant or enthusiastic player on the international arms control stage and the effect of international agreements on Britain's weapons programmes In exploring these issues the study provides the first attempt to assess UK NBC arms control policy and practice during the Cold War

Secrecy and Science Brian Balmer, 2016-04-01 It is no secret that twentieth century Britain was governed through a culture of secrecy and secrecy was particularly endemic in military research and defence policy surrounding biological and chemical warfare More generally it is hard to exaggerate the role of secrecy in all past biological and chemical warfare programmes and several recent historical surveys of biological and chemical warfare research have emphasised that all state sponsored programmes together with sub state organised activities were cloaked in utmost secrecy Of these research programmes Britain carried out one of the most significant in scale and scope in the twentieth century Yet partly because of the secrecy surrounding the programme there is still little academic literature on its historical development Equally and despite secrecy being a pervasive feature of past and contemporary societies social scientists and historians have paid relatively little scholarly attention to the nature mechanics and effects of secrecy particularly with regard to secrecy in relation to the production and governance of science and technology Drawing on classical sociological writing on secrecy by Simmel Merton and Shils this groundbreaking book by Brian Balmer draws on recently declassified documents to investigate significant episodes in the history of biological and chemical warfare At the same time it draws on more contemporary perspectives in science and technology studies that understand knowledge and social order as co produced within heterogeneous networks of things and people in order to develop a theoretical set of arguments about how the relationship between secrecy and science might be understood Secrecy and Science Professor Brian Balmer, 2013-01-28 It is no secret that twentieth century Britain was governed through a culture of secrecy and secrecy was particularly endemic in

Nerve Agents in Postwar Britain William King, 2021-08-25 This book reveals the nature and level of British engagement with controversial and lethal nerve agent weapons from the end of the Second World War to Britain's submission of a draft Chemical Weapons Convention At the very heart of this highly secretive aspect of British defence policy were fundamental questions over whether Britain should acquire nerve agent weapons for potential first use against the Soviet Union retain them purely for their deterrence value or drive for either unilateral or international chemical weapons disarmament These considerations and concerns over nerve agent weapons were not limited to low level defence committees nor were they consigned to the periphery but featured prominently at the highest levels of the British government and defence planning Importantly and despite stringent secrecy the book further uncovers how public scrutiny and protest movements played a substantial and successful part in influencing policy and attitudes towards nerve agent weapons
