Ecology and Conservation of the Marbled Murrelet C. John Ralph, 1997-04 This report was compiled describes past potential effects of humans on the species habitats Future research needs possible management strategies for both marine forest habitats are suggested Charts tables Ecology and Conservation of the Marbled Murrelet (Brachyramphus Marmoratus) in Central California Marcus Zachariah Peery, 2004 Ecology and Conservation of the Marbled Murrelet C. DeGange, 1996 Marbled Murrelet Conservation and Steller's Jay Ecology and Management in Coastal Redwood Forests Kristin Brunk, 2021 The Marbled Murrelet Brachyramphus marmoratus is a small federally threatened seabird native to the western coast of North America that ranges from the Aleutians to central California Murrelets are old growth forest specialists during the breeding portion of their life history and historic loss of old growth forest throughout much of the murrelet s range has resulted in greatly reduced murrelet populations especially in the southern most extent of the murrelet s range In central California approximately 85% of old growth forests have been lost due to timber harvest of economically valuable old growth trees Much of the remaining old growth forest is either on private property where murrelets are at the mercy of local forest management strategies or protected in national and state parks Additionally in the fragmented old growth that remains murrelets often experience elevated rates of nest predation largely by corvids such as Common Ravens Corvus corax and Steller s Jays Cyanocitta stelleri Indeed low reproductive success has been implicated in the ongoing decline of murrelet populations even though much of their remaining nesting habitat has been protected Habitat protected for murrelet breeding such as state parks is also often important for human recreation Human use of these protected areas has led to increased densities of corvids that take advantage of readily available human food subsidies Abundant human food subsidies potentially put murrelets at greater risk of nest predation and also affect the ecology and behavior of corvids The first two thirds of this dissertation examines the effectiveness of conservation measures to protect nesting habitat for marbled murrelets and to control populations of overabundant murrelet nest predators The last third focuses on understanding how human food subsidies affect the behavioral ecology of subsidized nest predators General Technical Report PNW-GTR ,2006 Wildlife Review ,1993
