Schaich,2012-12-06 For at least 40 years there has been a great interest in the problems created by infectious airborne agents and other toxic substances transported through the air During the Second World War this problem grew out of the very high incidence of upper respiratory infections appearing in new military recruits who were brought together in very large open quarters As a result very interesting methods were developed to measure these airborne agents especially bacteria and some important methods were refined for their control These methods primarily concentrated on ultraviolet radiation propylene glycol and other means to reduce the dust in an environment Because of the specialized circumstances at that time the whole consideration of airborne particles became prominent Now with the new strides in the recognition of mutagenic and carcinogenic effects attributed to exposure to airborne chemicals from today's technology the problem has again become quite prominent The development of experimental chambers has made it possible to conduct studies under carefully controlled conditions      Genotoxic Effects of Airborne Agents Raymond R.
