Stump, 2008-04-04 The only book of its kind this balanced and accessibly written text explores the geographical study of religion Roger W Stump presents a clear and meticulous examination of the intersection of religious belief and practice with the concepts of place and space He begins by analyzing the factors that have shaped the spatial distributions of religious groups including the seminal events that have fostered the organization of religions in diverse hearths and the subsequent processes of migration and conversion that have spread religious beliefs The author then assesses how major religions have diversified as they have become established in disparate places producing a variety of religious systems from a common tradition Stump explores the efforts of religious groups to control secular space at various scales relating their own uses of particular spaces and the meanings they attribute to space beyond the boundaries of their own communities Examining sacred space as a diverse but recurring theme in religious belief the book considers its role in religious forms of spatial behavior and as a source of conflict within and between religious groups Refreshingly jargon free and impartial this text provides a broad comparative view of religion as a focus of geographical inquiry

Sacred Places and Profane Spaces Jamie S. Scott, Paul S. Housley, 1991-09-30

The editors and contributors to this pioneering volume have focused the lense of geography on new territory as they inquire critically into the spatial dimensions of Judaism Christianity and Islam making this interdisciplinary project truly a new idea in the study of comparative religion and human geography Editors Jamie Scott and Paul Simpson Housley have organized the study into three broad areas of inquiry and have coined the term Geographics to encompass the three distinct yet interrelated spatial dimensions implicated in the study of religion The first area concerns the literal role played by specific sites regions or geographical phenomena in the development of the three religions The focus here is on city wilderness river valley and mountain as well as flood earthquake whirlwind and famine with attention devoted to methodological epistemological and ontological issues The symbolic or interpreted role played by these same specific entities in the three religions is the second notion to be explored The third focus is an inquiry into the geography of prophetic and apocalyptic visions and the role of geographical imagination in the development of religious self understanding This interface of natural and historical geography with the geography of the prophetic and apocalyptic imagination produces a graphic sometimes terrifying landscape The volume s nine essayists have approached their chapters with this threefold schematization in mind so that the book consists of one study devoted to each of these dimensions in Judaism Christianity and Islam as well as an introduction and afterword by the editors Each essay discusses the relationship of the spatial and the sacred in scripture and in subsequent literary and theological reflection upon scriptural themes The range of topics and variety of approaches used reflect the interpretive ambiguities that stem from the unique social political and economic functions conferred on places and spaces of particular significance in the life and thought of a religious tradition or community The section on Judaism explores Jewish agricultural settlements in Palestine the Temple Mount al haram al sharif and the Garden of Eden In depth looks at Finland women s geography and the apocalyptic world comprise the section on Christianity Iranian feasting and pilgrimage circuits modern Egypt and sacred geography are assessed in the final section on Islam This carefully edited innovative study offers a unique approach to the study of religion and will be read profitably by scholars and students of religion and geography
