our relatives and I am sure has no idea of the pain her words sometimes give to grandpa Art and myself 37 Ah there was in each young heart an unspoken fear that he would never rise from that couch of pain for they had seemed to read his doom in the grave anxious faces of grandfather and physicians but oh it was too terrible a fear for either to put into words even to her own consciousness My son she said with an affectionate look into the earnest face of the pleader I am glad to see your sympathy and love for your brother but I think your grandpa loves him quite as well and knows far better what is for his good and I cannot interfere between them my children must all be as obedient and submissive to my father as they are to me My dear child Elsie said in tones as tender and compassionate as she would have used to one of her own darlings and laying her hand affectionately on the young girl s shoulder I do not like to see you so hard at work while every one else is out enjoying this delightful weather
