

Hearing Faces: How the Infant Brain Matches the Face It Sees with the Speech It Hears

Abstract

■ Speech is not a purely auditory signal. From around 2 months of age, infants are able to correctly match the vowel they hear with the appropriate articulating face. However, there is no behavioral evidence of integrated audiovisual perception until 4 months of age, at the earliest, when an illusory percept can be created by the fusion of the auditory stimulus and of the facial cues (McGurk effect). To understand how infants initially match the articulatory movements they see with the sounds they hear, we recorded high-density EEPs in response to auditory vowels that followed a congruent or incongruent silently articulating face in 10-week-old infants. In a first experiment, we determined that auditory–visual integration occurs during the early stages of perception as in adults. The mismatch response was similar in timing and in topography whether the preceding vowels were presented visually or aurally. In the second experiment, we studied audiovisual integration in the linguistic (vowel perception) and nonlinguistic (gender perception) domain. We observed a mismatch response for both types of change at similar latencies. Their topographies were significantly different demonstrating that cross-modal integration of these features is computed in parallel by two different networks. Indeed, brain source modeling revealed that phonemic and gender computations were lateralized toward the left and toward the right hemisphere, respectively, suggesting that each hemisphere possesses an early processing bias. We also observed repetition suppression in temporal regions and repetition enhancement in frontal regions. These results underscore how complex and structured is the human cortical organization which sustains communication from the first weeks of life on. ■

INTRODUCTION

Phonemes are the elementary building blocks of speech, the combination of which allows the rich verbal exchanges between members of the human species. In adults, they are processed by a specialized and highly efficient left-hemispheric network, which subserves the singular properties of phoneme perception, such as categorical perception, normalization across nonpertinent acoustical variations, and so forth. There is a long-lasting debate about whether a similar network that might favor language acquisition is present in infants. Striking similarities are observed between infant and adult performances. Like adults, infants perceive phonemes categorically from birth (Eimas, Siqueland, Jusczyk, & Vigorito, 1971) and are able to normalize speech input (Kuhl, 1983). ERP studies have revealed that these capacities are based on a fast computation of a phonetic representation. Indeed, in infants, the response to a change of syllable occurring after several repetitions of the same syllable (mismatch response, MMR) demonstrates two of the main properties used to define phonetic representations in adults. First, the MMR is not affected by irrelevant variation in speaker (Dehaene-Lambertz & Pena, 2001). Second, it is categorical, being dependent on the linguistic value of the acoustical change. The MMR is larger after a change of syllable that crosses a phonetic boundary than after an acoustically similar change that occurs within the phonetic category (Dehaene-Lambertz & Baillet, 1998). Dipole modeling of the sources of this MMR points toward a temporal origin in infants (Dehaene-Lambertz & Baillet, 1998; Dehaene-Lambertz & Dehaene, 1994) as in adults (Näätänen et al., 1997).

To increase our understanding of speech perception early in life, we can turn to another property of phoneme perception observed in adults—the rapid and automatic integration of facial cues. Seeing the articulatory movements of the speaker improves the detection (Grant & Seitz, 2000) and understanding of speech sounds (Erber, 1975), especially in noisy situations. Moreover, facial information can modify the perception of speech sounds giving rise to a novel percept, a

I Can Hear Your Face Joan L. Brumble, 2014-01-08 ABOUT THE BOOK God has spoken to me on numerous occasions in reference to the title of the book I even shared the concept with a visiting pastor perhaps making it a sermon but to no avail I had felt it had fallen on deaf ears But later I knew that was part of God's plan When the idea of ICHYF I Can Hear Your Face was conceived in my heart and spirit it became alive and burned within my soul and then it came my Heavenly Father spoke to me I choose you I am the one who inspired and planted the seed in your heart I am the one keeping this concept alive I nourished it continually Write it down my daughter I will give you the inspiration to write the words as coming from me Live through them my daughter make my words come alive It pleases me that you are willing to obey me Remember my words when I said that I know you have little strength you've tried your best to keep my word and you have not denied my name These words will be my testimony of the truth I cannot deny my own name That which was first conceived in my spirit and my heart ICHYF really isn't anything new but it is speaking to a new audience perhaps because of a generational gap in coming from a solid Christian home All the trials heartaches much pain in my life God has worked out for good What he has and is doing in my life he will do for you Listen for God to whisper how much he loves you at the turn of every page All through the writing process I prayed for each one of you my readers that you will be truly be blessed by our Abba Father The

in solving many scientific and engineering problems For optimization problems however the differential calculus technique sometimes has a drawback when the objective function is step wise discontinuous or multi modal or when decision variables are discrete rather than continuous Thus researchers have recently turned their interests into metaheuristic algorithms that have been inspired by natural phenomena such as evolution animal behavior or metallic annealing This book especially focuses on a music inspired metaheuristic algorithm harmony search Interestingly there exists an analogy between music and optimization each musical instrument corresponds to each decision variable musical note corresponds to variable value and harmony corresponds to solution vector Just like musicians in Jazz improvisation play notes randomly or based on experiences in order to find fantastic harmony variables in the harmony search algorithm have random values or previously memorized good values in order to find optimal solution

Shuy, 1998-07-01 Plunging into the verbal quagmire of official language used by bureaucrats in both government and business distinguished linguist Roger W Shuy develops new techniques based on linguistic principles to improve their communication with the public Shuy presents nine case studies that reveal representative problems with bureaucratic language He characterizes the traits of bureaucratic language candidly though somewhat sympathetically and he describes how linguists can provide bureaucrats with both the tools for communicating more clearly and also the authority to implement these changes Drawing on documents cited in class action lawsuits brought against the Social Security Administration and Medicare Shuy offers a detailed linguistic analysis of these agencies problems with written and oral communication and he outlines a training program he developed for government writers to solve them Moving on to the private sector Shuy analyzes examples of the ways that businesses such as car dealerships real estate and insurance companies and commercial manufacturers sometimes fail to communicate effectively Although typically bureaucracies change their use of language only when a lawsuit threatens Shuy argues that clarity in communication is a cost effective strategy for preventing or at least reducing litigation Bureaucratic Language in Government and Business explains why bureaucratic language can be so hard to understand and what can be done about it Increase your Brainability—and Reduce your Risk of Dementia Charles Alessi, Larry W. Chambers, Muir Gray, 2021-05-27 Dreaded by many people as an inevitable part of normal aging Dementia has displaced Cancer as the most feared health problem Cancer continues to be a serious condition but it is often curable and almost always treatable In contrast the fear of dementia is complicated by the fear of ageing and by muddled thinking about its relationship with Alzheimer s disease Yet there is no reason to be disheartened Ever evolving scientific evidence means that we can be increasingly optimistic about the future and on going research shows that the problems we dread dementia disability and dependency can be controlled By taking steps to limit damage to the brain caused by stress sleep problems and inactivity throughout our lives it is more than possible to substantially reduce your risk of dementia Equally a loss of physical fitness which starts long before old age is preventable Based on research from the Optimal Ageing Programme and full of practical evidence based advice on managing the major risk factors underpinning dementia this book will inspire readers to fight back against the modern environment and negative societal attitudes Through simple but effective lifestyle changes that anyone can make everyone can take positive action to increase their brainability It is never too late to change your life reduce your risk and live better for longer The OHA Law Journal ,1991
