

How did the Irish government contribute to the consolidation of democracy, 1922- 1932? (100)

"I am not going to hesitate and if the country is to live and exterminate 10'000 republicans, the 3 million of our people are bigger than this 10,000"-WT Cosgrave on how the civil war was a minority acting against the majority

In 1922 Ireland was in the middle of a bloody civil war, which continued until march of 1923 .during the civil war and in its aftermath saw the establishment of what would become the republic of Ireland, and during this time the government lead by comman ngheal , many important state bodies were set up and policies were passed which led to the consolidation of democracy and the limiting the possibility of Ireland becoming a dictatorship. We are seeing the benefits of these bodies and policies today

One of the earliest threats to democracy in the free state was the presence of the anti treaty Ira as they were against a treaty ratified by a democratically elected body and were willing to use military force to use it. The provisional government in this period (Pro treaty sinn fein) which was led by Arthur Griffith who took measures to combat this threat this included replacing cathal brughu with Richard mulcahy as minister for defense and the establishment of an official army.

Another threat came from within the army when some military officers wanted to create an army convention which would run the army and be free from civilian control, this would deliver a devastating blow to democratic principles as in a democracy it is important that the army serves a government elected by the people, mulcahy banned this convention however he could not prevent it from happening I the march of that year the army convention was established by sixteen officers such as rory o conner. They were later arrested for going against official orders by the free state.

After the assassination of a British general in London by the anti treaty IRA sir Winston Churchill told the provisional Irish government that they must get rid of the anti trwaty Ira or they would do it themselves, so the free state army used British artillery to remove the anti treaty IRA (Who were against a treaty voted for by a democratically elected body) from the four courts . To combat this treaty they established a new army consisting of around 60'000 members , In the meantime both Arthur Griffith(The president) and Micheal Collins died leaving WT cosgrave in charge following an election in June 1922
