Haines, Dania Thomas, 2015-09-10 The issue of whether transnational risk can be regulated through a social sphere goes to the heart of what John Ruggie has described as embedded liberalism how capitalist countries have reconciled markets with the social community that markets require to survive and thrive This collection located in the wider debates about global capitalism and its regulation tackles the challenge of finding a way forward for regulation It rejects the old divisions of state and market citizens and consumers social movements and transnational corporations as well as economic and social regulation Instead this rich multidisciplinary collection engages with a critical theme the idea of harnessing the regulatory capacity of a social sphere by recognising the embeddedness of economic transactions within a social and political landscape This collection therefore explores how social norms practices actors and institutions frame economic transactions and thereby regulate risks generated by and for business state and citizens A key strength of this book is its integration of three distinct areas of scholarship Karl Polanyi's economic sociology regulation studies and socio legal studies of transnational hazards The collection is distinct in that it links the study of specific transnational risk regulatory regimes back to a social theoretical discussion about economy society interactions informed by Polanyi's work Each of the chapters addresses the way in which economics as well as economic and social regulation can never be understood separately from the social particularly in the transnational context Endorsement This thought provoking collection asks the most critical question of our time how to civilise markets through social accountability and political action The climate and financial crises we face show how crucial this challenge is Lange Haines and Thomas have put together a series of fruitful case studies of the possibilities for embedding economic relationships in social relationships by a series of top class researchers within their own illuminating and sensitive framing of the issue Professor Christine Parker Professor of Regulatory Studies at Monash University The transformatory demands of socialists and Greens Westra exorcizes both Soviet demons and ghosts of neoliberal ideologues past which lent support to the position that there is no alternative to the market Exit from Globalization shows in a clear and compelling fashion that while debates over the possibility of another potentially socialist world swirl around this or that grand society wide scheme the fact is that creative future directed thinking has at its disposal several economic principles that transformatory actors may choose from and combine in various ways to remake human economic life The book concludes with an examination of the various social constituencies currently supporting radical change and explores the narrowing pathways to bring change about
