Bosworth, Gary Burtless, 1998-05-01 By 2030 when most American baby boomers will have retired all the large industrial economies will see a massive increase in the old age population This book examines population aging and its implications for public retirement programs in the five largest industrial economies Britain France Germany Japan and the United States The authors report on national demographic trends examine the current living conditions of the aged population explain the structure of the retirement system and offer estimates of future budgetary costs of the public programs They also discuss national debates over the potential reform of public retirement systems While all five countries share the prospect of an older population variations in the size and timing of demographic change as well as important differences in the structure of public programs for the elderly suggest that population aging will have widely different implications in each country In Germany and Japan for example the population will not only grow older but may actually decline because of low birth rates The United States will experience less aging but its debate over reform treats seriously the possibility of privatizing public retirement commitments

The Aging Population and the Competitiveness of Cities Peter Karl Kresl,Daniele Ietri,2010-01-01 While much of the current literature on the economic consequences of an aging population focuses on the negative aspects this enlightening book argues that seniors can bring significant benefits such as vitality and competitiveness to an urban economy The authors illustrate the ways an aging population can have a positive impact on urban centers including the move by large numbers of seniors from the suburbs to the city where their disproportionate consumption of education and the arts helps rejuvenate city centers Given this the authors conclude that a large and active senior population has the potential to assist a city in the achievement of its strategic economic objectives The book includes analyses of the effects of population aging on best practices in 40 cities in the US and EU with surprising results as well as interviews with city officials and leaders Academics researchers and public officials in the areas of urban development public policy and aging will find much in this original approach to interest and provoke debate
