Preparing the Public Health Workforce Rosemary M. Caron, 2014-09-22 In concept and practice public health casts a wide net spanning assessment intervention and policy education prevention and protection public private and government entities But key elements are often missing from the picture including a clear understanding of public health and its goals by the general public and specific public health education throughout the workforce Preparing the Public Health Workforce responds to these and related challenges by elegantly summarizing the state of the field in an era of dwindling budgets competing and overlapping services and a shaky professional infrastructure In keeping with public health goals set out by the CDC and other leading agencies the author makes a real world case for standardizing training establishing best practices in the field and coordinating public health systems with their healthcare counterparts Theory case examples tools and callout boxes highlight knowledge preparation and skills professionals need in addressing chronic issues and complex emergencies Throughout the emphasis is on greater competency and visibility for the profession resulting in a more informed healthier public Featured in the coverage Issues in defining the public health workforce The state of public health education Practicing and teaching public health local national and international cases Standardizing public health practice benefits and challenges Integrating public health and healthcare The future of public health as seen from academia and the frontlines Identifying urgent issues and providing cogent answers Preparing the Public Health Workforce is a call to action for those involved in creating the next level of public health including professors practitioners students and administrators

Leveraging the Education-Health Connection David A. Birch, 2023-07-25 On the interdependent relationship between health and academic achievement Research indicates that healthy children are more likely to succeed in school and that individuals who attain higher levels of education are more likely to experience better health outcomes in adulthood To promote and support children's academic success educators must view student health as an education issue At the same time public health professionals must view students' academic success as a public health issue In Leveraging the Education Health Connection David A Birch explores this interdependent relationship and lays out strategies to improve outcomes for both education and health Birch provides evidence and recommendations on the links between student health and academic success and between education attainment and adult health outcomes the impacts of social injustice and early childhood experiences on health and education strategies for minimizing absenteeism promoting students and their parents' connection to the schools and increasing graduation rates the Whole School Whole Community Whole Child model that provides a framework for health promoting schools the collaborative role of educators physicians and public health professionals in advocacy for schools that promote meaningful learning and student well being and actions for establishing local coalitions that promote education and health and address social injustices Schools can act as partners with public health organizations to support initiatives that have a clear and direct bearing on educational outcomes such as quality health education and physical education nutrition education and services mental and emotional health services family and community engagement faculty and staff health promotion and a healthy and safe school environment This guide is an important resource for everyone working at the intersection of public health and education      Schools and Public Health Michael Gard, Carolyn Pluim, 2014-06-18 Schools and Public Health is a meditation on the past present and future of the relationship between public health and American public schools Gard and Pluim begin by developing a historical account of the way schools have been used in the public health policy arena in America They then look in detail at more contemporary examples of school based public health policies and initiatives in order to come to a judgment about whether and to what extent it makes sense to use schools in this way With this as the foundation the book then offers answers to the question of why schools have so readily been drawn into public health policy formulations First seeing schools as a kind of miracle factory is a long standing habit of mind that discourages careful consideration of alternative public health strategies Second schools have been implicated in public health policy in strategic ways by actors often with unstated political cultural ideological and financial motivations Finally the authors call for a more sophisticated approach to public health policy in schools and suggest some criteria for judging the potential efficacy of school based interventions In short the potential effectiveness of proposed interventions needs to be assessed not only against existing historical evidence but also against the competing roles society expects schools to play and the working life realities for those charged with implementing public health policies in schools      Exploring Opportunities for Collaboration Between Health and Education to Improve Population Health Institute of Medicine, Board on Population Health and Public Health Practice, Roundtable on Population Health Improvement, 2015-08-27 Research based on decades of experience in the developing world has identified educational status especially the status of the mother as a major predictor of health outcomes and that the literature indicates that the gradient in health outcomes by educational attainment has steepened over the last four decades across the United States Since the 1990s while the average life expectancy in the United States has been steadily increasing life expectancy has actually decreased for people without a high school education especially white women To understand the complex relationship between education and health and how this understanding could inform our nation's investments and policies the Institute of Medicine Roundtable on Population Health Improvement held a public workshop in Washington DC on June 5 2014 This workshop which featured presentations and extensive discussion periods also explored how the health and education sectors can work together more effectively to achieve improvements in both health status and educational achievement This report summarizes the presentations and discussion of the workshop
