Universities and Climate Action Tristan McCowan,2025-05-08 Universities have a pivotal role to play in addressing the climate crisis not only educating an increasingly large proportion of the global population but also through scientific breakthroughs technological innovation and raising public awareness Higher education is particularly important given the roots of ecological and social breakdown in our models of civilisation culture and knowledge Yet its potential has not always been realised and universities have historically been implicated in the exploitation and destruction of the natural environment and human communities A transformation is thus needed in higher education with institutions reorienting their activities towards positive engagement with climate

Universities and Climate Action presents an original framework for understanding the impact of universities on climate change It explores the interactions of education research services public debate and campus operations on society and the ecosphere and the complex interplay of influences on local national and global levels It provides in depth discussions of ways of engaging with climate in teaching and learning and the curriculum in research agendas in governance and management of estates and in engaging with external communities The theoretical models are contextualised with examples of climate action in universities around the world This book provides vital tools for analysis and action for researchers and practitioners working with and within the higher education sector Praise for Universities and Climate Action Universities and Climate Action is a critical timely and well evidenced call to transform higher education to tackle the climate crisis McCowan persuasively argues that universities must move beyond sustainability rhetoric to spearhead systemic change through education research activism and decolonised knowledge It is essential reading for educators policymakers and researchers Prof Leon Tikly University of Bristol This book unsettles the illusion that universities can simply green their way out of the climate crisis McCowan calls for a radical reimagining of education one that disrupts transforms and realigns knowledge with planetary survival Prof Iveta Silova Arizona State University

Geography, Culture and Education Rod Gerber, M. Williams, 2013-04-17 An important challenge for our world is to understand how cultural understanding and geographical education can be linked and used to improve the global society We readily accept that our world is constituted by numerous groups of people who are organised by committees tribes regions nations or continental entities How these groups interact show concern for each others well being and progress is still an unpredictable activity Intercultural tensions racial conflicts and religious clashes have all led to the challenges for enacting a constructive world Fundamental perspectives challenge moderate ones and the resulting tensions produce elements of fear, doubt and distrust. The extremist views of terrorist groups exaggerate these tensions to the extent that some different cultural groups do not prefer to live in peace with their neighbours. Deep seated intercultural tensions predominate over peaceful co-existence. Such challenges may easily dominate the interaction between racial groups, tribes, indigenous peoples and colonisers. However, we know that through the sound practice of intercultural understanding, cultural groups in different contexts around the world can interact and co-exist successfully and productively. In fact, they can work together to seek to improve their society. This does not mean that one group will dominate the other. Rather, it means that both groups work together to improve their collective lives. Education has played an important role in the long term achievement of such harmony. This volume has been developed to demonstrate that geographical education can be a potent force in the development of cultural understanding in different societies.

Educating for Sustainability in a Small Island Nation Jane Spiteri, 2023-01-19. This volume problematizes the intentions of early childhood education for sustainability (ECEfS) from two new perspectives: the context of small island states and the bi-directional intergenerational learning about the environment and sustainability that takes place in a variety of contexts including the family, home and school. It questions how belonging to a small island and the children's home influence learning in the early years of life. In doing so, this book offers new insights and new theoretical perspectives into intergenerational environmental learning in the school, family and beyond. Informed by consideration of the most recent literature in early childhood education and sustainability, this volume also looks at how these informal learning spaces provide young children with the opportunities to enhance further learning in the field, thus portraying the fluidity of intergenerational learning from different theoretical standpoints. It provides a deep insight into ECEfS and intergenerational learning about the environment and environmental issues in early childhood education from a perspective of a small island state by adopting a children's rights perspective. It additionally explores the relationship between early childhood theories, children's rights and postcolonial theory.

Concepts and Approaches for Sustainability Management Khai Ern Lee, 2020-01-23. With the introduction of the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development by the United Nations General Assembly in 25 September 2015, UN agencies, member states and stakeholders have begun to focus on the adoption and implementation of these strategies in realization of 17 Sustainable Development Goals. To work toward sustainability, strategic measures to encourage stakeholders to contribute to the goals of the 2030 agenda are needed.
