Postapocalyptic Fantasies in Antebellum American Literature John Hay, 2017-10-05 This book examines the widespread use of postapocalyptic fantasies in American literary texts in the early nineteenth century Picturesque

Literature and the Transformation of the American Landscape, 1835-1874 John Evelev, 2021 This work challenges dominant narratives of the concerns of nineteenth century literature to show how supposedly minor works of picturesque helped transform the American landscape and create what we now recognize as the defining spaces of American life

Critical Companion to Nathaniel Hawthorne Sarah Bird Wright, 2006 Offers critical entries on Hawthorne's novels short stories travel writing criticism and other works as well as portraits of characters including Hester Prynne and Roger Chillingworth This reference also provides entries on Hawthorne's family friends ranging from Herman Melville to President Franklin Pierce publishers and critics Narrating the Landscape Matthew N. Johnston, 2016-04-14 The American nineteenth century saw a largely rural nation confined to the Eastern Seaboard conquer a continent and spawn increasingly dense commercial metropolises This time of unprecedented territorial and economic growth has long been thought to find its most sweeping visual equivalent in the period's landscape paintings But as Matthew N Johnston shows the age's defining features were just as clearly captured in and motivated by visual material mass produced through innovations in printing technology Illustrated railroad and steamboat guidebooks tourist literature reports of geological surveys ethnographic studies all of these new print vehicles brought new meanings to the interplay of time space and place as American continental expansion peaked Instrumental to that project of national and industrial growth these commercial and scientific publications introduced readers travelers and citizens to a changing North American landscape made more accessible by new travel routes blazed between 1825 and 1875 More fundamentally as Johnston shows in his nuanced analysis by simulating new temporal frameworks through their presentation of landscape these print materials established new models of consumption and new kinds of knowledge critical to expansion Johnston relates these sources to traditional art historical subjects the landscapes of the Hudson River school luminist paintings by John Kensett and William Trost Richards Native portraits painted by George Catlin and photographs by Timothy O Sullivan to show how key discourses associated with expansion shifted away from picturesque strategies pairing imagery and narrative toward entirely new forms that gave temporal structure to viewers experience of an emerging modernity Revealing the crucial role of print and visual culture in shaping the nineteenth century United States Narrating the Landscape offers fresh insight into the landscapes Americans beheld and imagined in this formative era Romantic Cyborgs Klaus Benesch, 2009 Explores the relationship between authorship and technology in nineteenth century America City Building on the Eastern Frontier Diane

Shaw,2020-03-03 America's westward expansion involved more than pushing the frontier across the Mississippi toward the Pacific; it also consisted of urbanizing undeveloped regions of the colonial states. In 1810 New York's future governor DeWitt Clinton marveled that the rage for erecting villages is a perfect mania. The development of Rochester and Syracuse illuminates the national experience of internal economic and cultural colonization during the first half of the nineteenth century. Architectural historian Diane Shaw examines the ways in which these new cities were shaped by a variety of constituents: founders, merchants, politicians, and settlers, as opportunities to extend the commercial and social benefits of the market economy and a merchant culture to America's interior. At the same time, she analyzes how these priorities resulted in a new approach to urban planning. According to Shaw, city founders and residents deliberately arranged urban space into three segmented districts: commercial, industrial, and civic, to promote a self-fulfilling vision of a profitable and urbane city. Shaw uncovers a distinctly new model of urbanization that challenges previous paradigms of the physical and social construction of nineteenth-century cities. Within two generations, the new cities of Rochester and Syracuse were sorted at multiple scales, including not only the functional definition of districts but also the refinement of building types and styles, the stratification of building interiors by floor, and even the coding of public space by class, gender, and race. Shaw's groundbreaking model of early nineteenth-century urban design and spatial culture is a major contribution to the interdisciplinary study of the American city.

Transatlantic Literature and Author Love in the Nineteenth Century Paul Westover, Ann Wierda Rowland, 2016-09-22 This book is about Anglo-American literary heritage. It argues that readers on both sides of the Atlantic shaped the contours of international English in the 1800s, expressing love for books and authors in a wide range of media and social practices. It highlights how, in the wake of American independence, the affection bestowed on authors who became international objects of celebration and commemoration was a major force in the invention of transnational English literature, the popular canon defined by shared language and tradition. While love, as such, is difficult to quantify, and the records of such affection survive not just in print but also in other media—in monuments in architecture and in the ephemera of material culture—this collection brings into view a wide range of nineteenth-century expressions of love for literature and its creators.

Old and New New Englanders Bluford Adams, 2014-01-22 A cultural history of New England examining the notions of regional identity and its transformation between 1865 and 1900.

Story Line Ian Marshall, 1998 Weaving together stories of his hiking adventures with reflective explorations of literary works set along the Appalachian Trail, Marshall traces a literary geography of the trail that ranges from Georgia to Maine and spans three centuries.

Writing the Environment in Nineteenth-Century American Literature Steven Petersheim, Madison Jones IV, 2015-09-17 The nineteenth-century roots of environmental writing in American literature are often mentioned in passing and sometimes studied piece by piece. Writing the Environment in Nineteenth-Century American Literature: The Ecological Awareness of Early Scribes of Nature brings together numerous explorations of environmentally aware writing across the genres of nineteenth century literature Like Lawrence Buell the authors of this collection find Thoreau s writing a touchstone of nineteenth century environmental writing particularly focusing on Thoreau s claim that humans may function as scribes of nature However these studies of Thoreau s antecedents contemporaries and successors also reveal a range of other writers in the nineteenth century whose literary treatments of nature are often more environmentally attuned than most readers have noticed The writers whose works are studied in this collection include canonical and forgotten writers men and women early nineteenth century and late nineteenth century authors pioneers and conservationists They drew attention to the conflicted relationships between humans and the American continent as experienced by Native Americans and European Americans Taken together these essays offer a fresh perspective on the roots of environmental literature in nineteenth century American nonfiction fiction and poetry as well as in multi genre compositions such as the travel writings of Margaret Fuller Bringing largely forgotten voices such as John Godman alongside canonical voices such as Nathaniel Hawthorne Herman Melville Walt Whitman and Emily Dickinson the authors whose writings are studied in this collection produced a diverse tapestry of nascent American environmental writing in the nineteenth century From early nineteenth century writers such as poet Philip Freneau and novelist Charles Brockden Brown to later nineteenth century conservationists such as John James Audubon and John Muir Scribes of Nature shows the development of an environmental consciousness and a growing conservationist ethos in American literature Given their often surprisingly healthy respect for the natural environment these nineteenth century writers offer us much to consider in an age of environmental crisis The complexities of the supposed nature culture divide still work into our lives today as economic and environmental issues are often seen at loggerheads when they ought to be seen as part of the same conversation of what it means to live healthy lives and to pass on a healthy world to those who follow us in a world where human activity is becoming increasingly threatening to the health of our planet

Immigration, Ethnicity, and Class in American Writing, 1830-1860 Leonardo Buonomo, 2013-12-04 This book examines the close relationship between the portrayal of foreigners and the delineation of culture and identity in antebellum American writing Both literary and historical in its approach this study shows how in a period marked by extensive immigration heated debates on national and racial traits during a flowering in American letters encouraged responses from American authors to outsiders that not only contain precious insights into nineteenth century America s self construction but also serve to illuminate our own time s multicultural societies The authors under consideration are alternately canonical Emerson Hawthorne Melville recently rediscovered Kirkland or simply neglected Arthur The texts analyzed cover such different genres as diaries letters newspapers manuals novels stories and poems The Nathaniel Hawthorne Review, 2007 The Roots of Flower City Camden Burd, 2024-10-15 In The Roots of Flower City Camden Burd explores the economic and ecological significance of Rochester plant nurserymen over the course of the nineteenth century As the first boomtown in the United States Rochester was an embodiment of nineteenth century market economies and social reform movements

Connected to the eastern seaboard by the Erie Canal the city's unique economic cultural and environmental conditions fostered and sustained a vast and influential commercial plant nursery industry that attracted the nation's most prominent horticulturists and nurserymen Rochester area nurserymen built parks and rural cemeteries landscaped homes and schools and promoted horticultural pursuits regionally and nationally As their influence grew many of these horticultural entrepreneurs developed into the city's elite and played a leading role in shaping Rochester's economic social and physical landscape Most significantly nurserymen enthusiastically participated in the American imperial project selling and distributing fruit shade and ornamental trees shrubs and flowers across the continent transforming landscapes and ecologies far beyond New York The Roots of Flower City tells the remarkable history of Rochester's outsized influence on the homes estates towns and cities of nineteenth century America as it weathered economic downturns and competition from other regions One threat however proved to be too much to overcome As Burd details the spread of the destructive San Jose scale through the transcontinental plant trade prompted federal legislation that would lead to the decline of the Rochester plant nursery industry in the last decade of the nineteenth century ending a sustained era of success and ecological impact

Culinary Aesthetics and Practices in Nineteenth-Century American Literature M. Drews,M. Elbert,2009-10-26 Culinary Aesthetics and Practices in Nineteenth Century American Literature examines the preponderance of food imagery in nineteenth century literary texts Contributors to this volume analyze the social political and cultural implications of scenes involving food and dining and illustrate how aesthetic notions of culinary preparation are often undercut by the actual practices of cooking and eating As contributors interrogate the values and meanings behind culinary discourses they complicate commonplace notions about American identity and question the power structure behind food production and consumption

Hawthorne, Sculpture, and the Question of American Art Deanna Fernie,2011 Analyzing sculpture in Hawthorne's fiction through the recurring motif of the fragment in its double guise as ruin and project Deanna Fernie establishes the intellectual contexts for her study through a discussion of sculpture and fragmentary form as revealed in American British and Continental thought Her book will be an important text not only for American literature scholars but also for anyone interested in British and Continental Romanticism and the intersections of art and literature
