Intimate Partner Violence Against Women and Its Implications for Women's Health in Pakistan Rubeena Zakar,2012 Like other developing countries in Pakistan women are frequently victims of intimate partner violence Studying violence in a conservative patriarchal set up is a challenging task as the issue is denied and usually concealed under the cloak of family privacy Thus far in Pakistan intimate partner violence is not recognized as a public health and developmental issue This study intends to fill this research gap and documents intimate partner violence as a public health issue by investigating its association with women s mental and reproductive health in Pakistan This research is theoretically embedded in the integrated ecological framework introduced by Heise 1998 to explain and explicate the complexity of the phenomenon of intimate partner violence In patriarchal societies girls are usually socialized in such a way that they become submissive and dependent on men In order to ensure women s docility and obedience women are subjected to control discipline and sometimes violent punishment Foucault 1977 The core assumption of this research is that violence or threat of violence damages women's physical mental and reproductive health Arguably violence also constricts women's ability to develop essential capabilities to live an independent and dignified life Nussbaum 2005 Data showed that the acts of violence rendered substantial damage to women's mental and reproductive health It was found that sexual violence was significantly associated with non use of contraceptives and unintended pregnancies which may lead to unsafe and high risk abortions The qualitative data revealed that physicians and other stakeholders e.g religious leaders community leaders lacked competence training and resources to provide comprehensive care to the victims This study demonstrates that without protecting women from violence Pakistan cannot achieve Millennium Development Goals especially reduction in infant and maternal mortality gender equality and wom

Biological Contributions to Crime Causation T.E. Moffitt, Sarnoff A. Mednick, 2012-12-06 This book presents reviews of the literature and reports of new findings from research into biological correlates of criminal behavior The chapters are revised versions of talks given by participants in an Advanced Study Institute sponsored by the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and held in Castelvechio Pascoli in September 1986 It is our second edited volume on biology and crime The first book The Causes of Crime: New Biological Approaches was published in 1987 In the preface to that book we described the regrettable history of the pseudobiological research into social problems conducted by the Social Darwinists at the turn of the century We requested that that unfortunate legacy not inhibit responsible and scientifically sound investigations of biological and psychological variables in criminology today Evidence is mounting that shows that research limited to social and environmental variables cannot explain the behavior of the minority of criminal offenders whose criminal careers begin in adolescence and develop into recidivistic and violent assaults on society Certainly these offenders are few but epidemiological studies have found them to be responsible for an amount of crimes disproportionate to their small numbers As few 5 % of males commit over 50% of criminal offenses Intervention directed at these relatively few individuals could if successful dramatically reduce our growing violent crime rate The chapters in our earlier book showed that some biological variables do relate to this type of chronic offending
