A Comparative Study of International, U.S., and Chinese Ship-Source Hazardous Substances Pollution
Ruixuan Zhuo, 2025-10-17 The book systematically discusses how to better regulate and reduce ship source hazardous substances pollution It analyzes international U S and Chinese laws and regulations from the perspectives of pollution prevention and control emergency response and environmental remediation and liability and compensation for damage Through case studies of major ship source hazardous substances pollution incidents in the United States and China the author concludes that prevention control and response measures must be considered alongside conflicts between pollution control objectives and other economic social and political constraints Additionally in China prevention control and response efforts are constrained by a narrow definition of damage insufficient liability limits and underdeveloped insurance and supplementary funding mechanisms despite the consideration of environmental claims in the compensation regimes The author calls for adequate legal institutions that include discharge standards and permits emergency response protocols strict compensation standards limited defenses a supplementary compensation fund and comprehensive enforcement that integrates national regulations and international cooperation This book serves as a useful reference for students scholars and legal professionals specializing in shipping maritime and environmental law

Voluntary Cleanup Programs and Redevelopment Potential: Lessons from Baltimore, Maryland: A Reprint From iCityscape Dennis Guignet, 2011-04 In the U S policy has increasingly shifted toward economic incentives and liability attenuation for promoting cleanup and redevelopment of contaminated sites but little is known about the effectiveness of such policies These policies include state Voluntary Cleanup Programs VCPs This study focuses on 116 Baltimore properties that were enrolled and participated in the Maryland VCP from its inception in 1997 to the end of 2006 and examines what type of properties tend to participate in these programs how these properties compare with other eligible but non participating sites and what the redevelopment potential of VCP properties and implications is toward open space conversion Charts and tables This is a print on demand report
