Einstein Freud Marx Vs Darwin:

At the End of an Age John Lukacs, 2003-09-10 At the End of an Age is a deeply informed and rewarding reflection on the nature of historical and scientific knowledge. Of extraordinary philosophical, religious, and historical scope, it is the product of a great historian's lifetime of thought on the subject of his discipline and the human condition. While running counter to most of the accepted ideas and doctrines of our time, it offers a compelling framework for understanding history, science, and man's capacity for self-knowledge. In this work, John Lukacs describes how we in the Western world have now been living through the ending of an entire historical age that began in Western Europe about five hundred years ago. Unlike people during the ending of the Middle Ages or the Roman empire, we can know where we are. But how and what is it that we know? In John Lukacs's view, there is no science apart from scientists, and all of science, including our view of the universe, is a human creation imagined and defined by fallible human beings in a historical continuum. This radical and reactionary assertion, in its way a summa of the author's thinking expressed here and there in many of his previous twenty odd books, leads to his fundamental assertion that, contrary to all existing cosmological doctrines and theories, it is this earth which is the very center of the universe, the only universe we know and can know.

Invisible Criticism Alan Nadel, 1988. Paper reissue of the 1972 edition. Crane argues that the social institution responsible for the growth of scientific knowledge is the small group of highly productive scientists who, sharing the same field of study, set priorities for research, recruit and train students, communicate with one another, and thus monitor the rapidly changing structure of knowledge in their field. First published hardcover in 1988, Nadel exposes some of the ways Ellison situates Invisible Man in regard to the American literary tradition, comments on that tradition, and in doing so, alters it.
