English Country Furniture:

English Country Furniture David Knell,1992 A preoccupation with the finest period furnishings of the upper classes of English society has until very recently dominated the literature on antique furniture resulting in a neglect of the humbler but equally important furniture used in ordinary homes over the centuries While furniture historians in North America and in many European countries have long accepted the vital importance of their own vernacular or country furniture recognising it as an essential element of social history the English equivalent has often been treated almost with contempt by British writers and relegated to the back pages of native furniture studies This attitude is now recognised as unacceptable however and the vernacular furniture of England has accordingly become the focus of intensive research Making use of much of this recent research English Country Furniture throws fresh light on the uses dates and stylistic differences of the everyday furniture found in cottages farmhouses and town houses of ordinary people over a span of some four centuries Special emphasis is placed on the 18th and 19th centuries in recognition of the much higher survival rates of true folk furniture from more recent times Each of the examples illustrated most of them previously unpublished in book form is accompanied by a detailed caption giving timber an accurate date range and an extensive description including such information as regional characteristics finish stylistic influence and construction This is the only major work devoted to the evolution of both national and regional vernacular furniture in England from the Middle Ages up to the 20th century It is also the first to stress the full importance of Oriental influence on 18th century furniture design the first to make use of fresh and exciting material salvaged from the Mary Rose and the first to pinpoint precisely the inventions of several items of machinery used in furniture making American and English Country Furniture Sotheby Parke Bernet Inc,1958 Traditional Country
