cooperation of Ellie Chambers and Marshall Gregory has produced an outstanding book that ought to be on the shelves of anyone involved in the teaching of English Literature as well as anyone engaged in the scholarship of teaching and learning in general or in any discipline. As they say, the teaching of English Literature plays a central role in human beings' search for meaning, although others in other disciplines may make this claim for theirs too. If so, they will still learn a great deal from this book. Anyone looking for no more than a means of satisfying the demands of governments that look for simplistic quality measures and economic relevance let them look elsewhere. This is a book for now and for all times. Professor Lewis Elton, Visiting Professor, University of Manchester; Honorary Professor, University College London. This is the third in the series Teaching and Learning the Humanities in Higher Education. The book is for beginning and experienced teachers of literature in higher education. The authors present a comprehensive overview of teaching English literature from setting teaching goals and syllabus planning through to a range of student assessment strategies and methods of course or teacher evaluation and improvement. Particular attention is paid to different teaching methods from the traditional classroom to newer collaborative work, distance education and uses of electronic technologies. All this is set in the context of present day circumstances and agendas to help academics and those in training become more informed and better teachers of their subject. The book includes how literature as a discipline is currently understood and constituted, what it means to study and learn the subject, what good teaching is with fewer resources for teaching larger student numbers, an emphasis on user pay principles and vocationalism. This is an essential text for teachers of English Literature in universities and colleges worldwide. The Teaching and Learning in the Humanities series, edited by Ellie Chambers and Jan Parker, is for beginning and experienced lecturers. It deals with all aspects of teaching individual arts and humanities subjects in higher education. Experienced teachers offer authoritative suggestions on how to become critically reflective about discipline specific practices.

Research on Becoming an English Teacher Tony Brown, Mike Dore, Christopher Hanley, 2019-07-31. Research on Becoming an English Teacher considers the process of becoming a teacher from a variety of perspectives where the ambition is to consider how people can change themselves within that process. By pursuing an approach influenced by the psychoanalytic theory of Jacques Lacan, the authors consider practitioner research as an approach to professional and personal development and how it might be understood as a strategy within both teaching and teacher education. Taking English teaching as the main example, this book explores the processes and discourses that shape the experience of English teaching in schools. Chapters consider the origin and development of English education practice and theory in English education, the process of becoming a teacher in school based environments and creating an analytical space for learning narratives in teacher education. This book will be of interest to academics, researchers and post graduate students in the fields of teacher education, curriculum studies, educational theory and educational psychology.
