entrepreneurial skills available and the support of provided by institutions and information networks The very local nature these phenomena which are critical to the innovative propensity of firms operating within the region introduces an inevitable spatial dimension The time therefore seems ripe to bring together contributions from scholars working in different but related disciplines with the aim of investigating the triangular relationship between technological change economic development and space The present volume offers a compact review of current theoretical developments and valuable insights deriving from recent empirical studies carried out both within Europe and elsewhere All those contributing to this volume are actively involved in research in the field Without their intellectual contribution and willingness to participate in this joint project the book would not have been possible We should like in addition to thank Angela Spence for her capable assistance in coordinating the various stages of preparation of the book as well as her translation work and careful linguistic editing Thanks also go to Paola Stasi for her meticulous copy editing and help in preparing the indices Their work has been invaluable in moulding together in a single volume contributions from so many different sources activities is explored There are two major sets of influences on the innovativeness and competitiveness of places 1 technical skills and information are key in the process of technological change and competition and 2 urban areas contain a complex synergy of factors that smaller more remote places cannot attain Producer services which are strongly based on knowledge and symbolic analysis are therefore typically clustered in cities Small firms and entrepreneurship are examined as a crucial part of a well functioning regional economy Research has demonstrated the close relationship between entrepreneurship and regional and local development Innovativeness developed within local inter firm networks both supports existing firms and presents opportunities for starting new businesses in order to serve newly identified markets Networks of firms complement and sometimes substitute for a firm s own technological capability Networks of large firms and the globalization of economic activity are then considered Policy attempts at national regional and local scales to influence the location of economic activity are analyzed The economic progress and prospects of developing countries are assessed Policies for innovation entrepreneurship and the functioning of the economy are essential and require flexibility in order to respond to changing conditions in the world economy in specific product markets and in technology Concludes with a discussion of some of the central themes that were facing society at the end of the 1990s including basic needs for human development environmental issues employment and human capital and infrastructures for future technologies AT
