Funeral Register Of The First Presbyterian Church In Belfast 171236:

Funeral Register of the First Presbyterian Church of Belfast, 1712-36 Jean Agnew, 1995 The First and Second Presbyterian Congregations of Belfast in Rosemary Street owned a collection of palls cloaks and hats which were hired out for funerals They were used by the inhabitants of Belfast and many of the gentry clergy and substantial farmers in the surrounding countryside regardless of religion This register which covers the years 1712 1736 is a record of the hiring of this funeral gear for about 2000 funerals which took place in the town and as far afield as Counties Londonderry and Tyrone Much of the original register has been reprinted here together with an index of names making it immediately accessible for research To this has been added a series of biographical notes on many of the merchants gentry clergy and tradesmen whose funerals are noted

Possessed By the Devil Andrew Sneddon, 2013-05-15 County Antrim Ireland 1711 Eight women were put on trial accused of bewitching and demonically possessing young Mary Dunbar amid an attack by evil spirits on the local community and after the supernatural murder of a clergyman s wife Mary Dunbar was the star witness in this trial and the women were by the standards of the time believable witches they dabbled in magic they smoked they drank they had disabilities A second trial targeted a final male witch and head of the Sellor witch family With echoes of the Salem witch hunt this is a story of murder of a community in crisis and of how the witchhunts that claimed over 50 000 lives in Europe played out on Irish shores It plunges the reader into a world where magic was real and the power of the Devil felt with disastrous consequences

Belfast Merchant Families in the Seventeenth Century Jean Agnew, 1996 Profiles of thirty families of Presbyterian Scots who became prominent Belfast merchants in the 1600 s are included with historical background of the city

A Union of Multiple Identities L. W. B. Brockliss, David Eastwood, 1997 This book explores the importance of history to Elizabethan and early Stuart gentry and how this led to a vibrant antiquarian culture The family town and county histories written by the community which form the core of the study had an influence on the development of local history in England which lasted into the twentieth century and is still felt today Eschewing a narrow historiographical approach the author examines a range of manuscript and published works and other material reflecting the gentry s interest in the past pedigree rolls antiquarian notebooks heraldic displays and maps The book provides a survey of the development of local history in England from its medieval origins to 1660 This is followed by chapters on the practicalities of local historical research the national educational and institutional framework the development of regional networks of local historians and the gentlemen who controlled access to their sources and analysis of the source materials available The final section features chapters on genealogy didacticism and the physical world
