Hardscrabble Or the Fall of Chicago Richardson Richardson,2015-07-14 Excerpt from Hardscrabble or the Fall of Chicago A Tale of Indian Warfare It was on a beautiful day in the early part of the month of April 1812 that four persons were met in a rude farm house situated on the Southern Branch of the Chicago river and about four miles distant from the fort of that name They had just risen from their humble mid day meal and three of them were now lingering near the fire place filled with blazing logs which at that early season diffused a warmth by no means disagreeable and gave an air of cheerfulness to the interior of the smoke discolored building He who appeared to be master of the establishment was a tall good looking man of about forty five who had evidently been long a denizen of the forest for his bronzed countenance bore traces of care and toil while his rugged yet well formed hands conveyed the impression of the unceasing war he had waged against the gigantic trees of this Western land He was habited in a hunting frock of grey homespun reaching about half way down to his knee and trimmed with a full fringe of a somewhat darker hue His trowsers

were of the same material and both were girt around his loins by a common belt of black leather fastened by a plain white buckle into which was thrust a sheath of black leather also containing a large knife peculiar to the backwoodsmen of that day His feet were encased in moccasins and on his head covered with strong dark hair was carelessly donned a slouched hat of common black felt with several plaited folds of the sweet grass of the adjoining prairie for a band Ho was seemingly a man of strong muscular power while his stern dark eye denoted firmness and daring The elder of the two men to whom this individual stood evidently in the character of a superior was a short thick set person of about fifty with huge whiskers that originally black had been slightly grizzled by time His eyebrows were bushy and overhanging and almost concealed the small and twinkling eyes which it required the beholder to encounter more than once before he could decide their true color to be a dark gray About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works

The Canadian Don Quixote David R. Beasley, 2004 Richardson 1796-1852 born in Newark Upper Canada and dying in New York City laid the foundations of Canadian literature The author of Wacousta and The Canadian Brothers had an adventurous energetic life as this standard biography so well reveals Beasley's whole work teems with such careful loving research and this makes his biography of Richardson not only a good read but the fulfillment of what's usually called an aching void James Reaney poet and playwright whose life was so filled with dramatic events whose career brought him in contact with important historical figures and episodes and who first showed that Canadian history was
