Embodied Inequalities in Disability and Development Hisayo Katsui, Virpi Mesiäislehto, 2022-04-08 This book highlights the embodied knowledge of persons with disabilities as a vital resource for understanding equality without taking disability and development for granted The perspective of embodied inequality offers alternative ways to comprehend our normality as until now the notion of normality has too frequently excluded persons with disabilities and their perspectives Disability inclusion has never been as important as it is today in the development discourse yet systematic discrimination against people due to their disabilities persists To address this the link between theories and practices is strengthened in this book Through using different contexts in the different book chapters the readers are informed of how profoundly inequalities are embedded in our society and pronounced as embodied experiences of persons with disabilities The chapters are written not only by academics but also by disability activists and NGO representatives The chapters focus on disabilities and development as embodied inequalities manifested at different levels including theory law and policy and practice In conclusion the book presents 6 As as lessons learned from decolonial understanding and conceptions of embodied inequalities in different contexts of disability and development Availability Affordability Accessibility Accountability Assistance and Affection

Geographies of Race and Food Rachel Slocum, Arun Saldanha, 2016-04-15 While interest in the relations of power and identity in food explodes a hesitancy remains about calling these racial What difference does race make in the fields where food is grown the places it is sold and the manner in which it is eaten How do we understand farming and provisioning tasting and picking eating and being eaten hunger and gardening better by paying attention to race This collection argues there is an unacknowledged racial dimension to the production and consumption of food under globalization Building on case studies from across the world it advances the conceptualization of race by emphasizing embodiment circulation and materiality while adding to food advocacy an antiracist perspective it often lacks Within the three socio physical spatialities of food fields bodies and markets the collection reveals how race and food are intricately linked An international and multidisciplinary team of scholars complements each other to shed light on how human groups become entrenched in myriad hierarchies through food at scales from the dining room and market stall to the slave trade and empire Following foodways as they constitute racial formations in often surprising ways the chapters achieve a novel approach to the process of race as one that cannot be reduced to biology culture or capitalism      Situational

Nguyen, 2022-05-18 The COVID 19 global health pandemic which started in late December 2019 forced many countries to adopt unusual measures such as social distancing and strict lockdowns It changed many of our certainties and practices including the foundations of the market led version of capitalism by bringing social and health considerations back to the forefront of firms considerations investors strategies and governments priorities Under the effects of this unprecedented crisis all sectors of finance and real economy have been seriously affected Health uncertainties and their increasing consequences for human life and activities require stronger and faster actions to shape pathways towards sustainability and better resilience The COVID 19 health crisis is a visible part of a greater iceberg the World Health Organization has tracked over recent years a large number of epidemic events around the world suggesting that many other similar diseases could appear and evolve in the future from epidemic to pandemic in a globalized world Financial Transformations Beyond the COVID 19 Health Crisis was specifically designed to provide the readers with new results recent findings and future outlook on the impacts of COVID 19 on financial markets firm behaviors and finance and investment strategies It favors multidimensional perspectives and brings together conceptual empirical and policy oriented chapters using quantitative and qualitative methods alike This is a timely and comprehensive collection of theoretical empirical and policy contributions from renowned scholars around the world and provides the thoughts and insights required to rethink the financial sector in the event of new shocks of the same nature      Bioethics Reenvisioned Nancy M. P. King, Gail E. Henderson, Larry R.

Churchill, 2022-11-29 Bioethics needs an expanded moral vision Born in the ferment of the 1970s the field responded to rapid developments in biomedical technology and injustices in clinical care and research Since then bioethics has predominantly focused on respect for autonomy beneficence and nonmaleficence and the zero sum lifeboat ethics of distributive justice applying these principles almost exclusively within the walls of medical institutions It is now time for bioethics to take full account of the problems of health disparities and structural injustice that are made newly urgent by the COVID 19 pandemic and the effects of climate change This book shows why and how the field must embrace a broader and more meaningful view of justice principally by incorporating the tools and insights of the social sciences epidemiology and public health Nancy M P King Gail E Henderson and Larry R Churchill make the case for a more social understanding and application of justice a deeper humility in assessing expertise in bioethics consulting a broader and more relevant research agenda and greater appreciation of the profound health implications of global warming

Migration and Health Heide Castañeda, 2022-07-27

Migration and Health Critical Perspectives offers a radical rethinking of the field by unsettling conventional ideas of mobility and borders to highlight the ways in which they produce health inequalities Covering a wide range of topics the text provides insight through a critical lens and proposes areas for intervention along with an added emphasis on the need for future research to address the health inequities that affect migrants It illustrates how a critical perspective can deepen our understanding of the relationship between migration and health which remains a defining global issue of our century The text employs a critical approach to examine the structural conditions of inequality and larger historical and political processes recognizing that exclusionary bordering practices increasingly occur away from physical points of entry It posits the concept of migration as complex tangled and multi directional and underscores how migrant vulnerability can shape the lives of people in wider communities Furthermore it acknowledges diverse and intersectional standpoints as well as shifting spatial and temporal influences Chapters include coverage of health in transit healthcare access and utilization clinical encounters communicable disease labor and occupational health gender and sexuality immigration enforcement detention deportation and the effects of forced displacement on refugee and asylum seeker health The text is useful for students and scholars of migration or health disparities seeking to understand how the two issues can be approached in a more holistic and critical way It is further aimed at practitioners and policymakers who are interested in gaining familiarity with the structural conditions of inequality along with the larger historical and political processes that influence contemporary migration patterns

Climate Change from the Streets Michael Méndez, 2020-01-07 An urgent and timely story of the contentious politics of incorporating environmental justice into global climate change policy Although the science of climate change is clear policy decisions about how to respond to its effects remain contentious Even when such decisions claim to be guided by objective knowledge they are made and implemented through political institutions and relationships and all the competing interests and power struggles that this implies Michael Méndez tells a timely story of people place and power in the context of climate change and inequality He explores the perspectives and influence low income people of color bring to their advocacy work on climate change In California activist groups have galvanized behind issues such as air pollution poverty alleviation and green jobs to advance equitable climate solutions at the local state and global levels Arguing that environmental protection and improving public health are inextricably linked Méndez contends that we must incorporate local knowledge culture and history into policymaking to fully address the global complexities of climate change and the real threats facing our local communities

Counting Matters Christina Gabriel, L. Pauline Rankin, 2024-04-15 Counting Matters examines the ways in which the rise of gender equality measurement contributes to but falls short of effective gender equality policy implementation As technocrats adopt often contextless indices questions of the theoretical and practical limitations of measurement arise especially as they pertain to social and cultural relations The indicators being produced influence the allocation of resources as political decisions but are themselves part of a power regime based on the collection and analysis of data a regime that obfuscates biases and the agendas behind the statistics The book's contributors pose critical questions of the ways in which measurement culture manifests within the field of gender equality asking how it is measured in different policy areas how we might improve existing practices and what is revealed through the examination and critique of the technical turn in policies that purport to promote gender equality
