

STEPHEN DWOSKIN: "He's one of the last great film-makers, only nobody's realized it yet ... A legendary 'underground' figure." — Liberation (France)

With HA, HA! the "father of the film underground" in London literally deconstructs the film image and our preconceptions, with implicit reference to the nude in art, advertising and pornography. That he does this, smiling, is in itself an extraordinary achievement. As a guest in Dwoskin's world of images, you will be guided by an original text, following his drift between the surrealist writing of Alfred Jarry and the love poetry of John Donne — from the pataphysical to the metaphysical.

Dwoskin's visual style is characterized by the curious physicality with which he handles the camera, an obsession with images of the body, its memories and its intimate world. The response of the audience wavers between intense personal empathy, discomfort, fear and laughter (HA, HA!). Indifference is impossible.

While Dwoskin's work has been acclaimed in such places as The Guardian and The Times of London and The New York Times, his favorite comment is from a student: "For me, Steve Dwoskin did for the camera what Thelonius Monk did for jazz piano."

Dwoskin left his native New York City for London in 1964, where he soon established his international reputation with such classics as "Alone" and "Chinese Checkers." During the 70's, he began a series of avant-garde feature films, which led to productions in Germany and France as well as the U.K. and a succession of festival presentations — The Directors' Fortnight, Cannes; Berlin; Mannheim; Oberhausen; Rotterdam; Sydney; London; Toronto; Montreal; Edinburgh; Locarno; Pesaro; Madrid; Melbourne; Toulon. For his total work in cinema, he won the Solvay Prize in Belgium and La Niña in Málaga. Awards for individual films include L'Age D'Or "Outside In," Best Foreign Film at Toulon for "Dys Amo," German Critics' Award for "Schindler," Best Director Award (Canada) for "Shadows From Light." Major Dwoskin film retrospectives have been held in fourteen cities including New York, London, Geneva and Madrid, and his work has been shown in many museums such as the Whitney and MOMA.

Dwoskin began his career as an award-winning graphic designer and art director in New York City in parallel with his work as a painter and freelance photographer.
