Habitat Conservation Planning Endangered Species And Urban Growth:

Habitat Conservation Planning Timothy Beatley, 1994 As environmental awareness grows around the world people are learning that a diversity of species and the habitat to support them is necessary to maintain the ecological health of the earth At the same time however the pressure to develop wildlife habitat for human settlement and economic gain also grows causing frequent clashes between the forces of development and of conservation This pioneering study focuses on a new tool for resolving the land use conflict the creation of habitat conservation plans HCPs Timothy Beatley explores the development and early results of this provision of the United States federal Endangered Species Act which allows development of some habitat and a certain take of a protected species in return for the conservation of sufficient habitat to ensure its survival and long term recovery Beatley looks specifically at nine HCPs in California Nevada Texas and Florida states where biological diversity and increasing populations have triggered many conflicts Some of the HCPs include the San Bruno Mountain HCP near San Francisco the North Key Largo HCP in the Florida Keys the Clark County HCP near Las Vegas Nevada and the Balcones Canyonlands HCP near Austin Texas This first comprehensive overview of habitat conservation planning in the United States will be important reading for everyone involved in land use debates Threatened and Endangered

Planning Reed F. Noss, Michael O'Connell, Dennis D. Murphy, 1997-10 In The Science of Conservation Planning three of the nation's leading conservation biologists explore the role of the scientist in the planning process and present a framework and guidelines for applying science to regional habitat based conservation planning Chapters consider history and background of conservation planning efforts criticisms of science in conservation planning principles of conservation biology that apply to conservation planning detailed examination of conservation plans and specific recommendations for all parties involved The Science of Conservation Planning will serve as a model for the application of conservation biology to real life problems and can lead to the development of scientifically and politically sound plans that are likely to achieve their conservation goals even in cases where biological and ecological information is limited Final Eir/eis ,1997 Balancing Environment and

Development Lloyd S. Dixon, 2008 The Western Riverside County Multiple Species Habitat Conservation Plan MSHCP is an ambitious effort to balance development and environmental concerns in an area of rapid urban growth In return for setting up a 500 000 acre conservation reserve the U S Fish and Wildlife Service and the California Department of Fish and Game granted the county and cities in western Riverside County a 75 year take permit for endangered species The take permit allows the cities and county to approve development projects outside the reserve that could negatively affect 146 sensitive plant and animal species The plan is supposed to speed the frequently time consuming and litigious process of permitting new highway and development projects while establishing an integrated conservation reserve rather than the patchwork of uncoordinated reserves that was so often the case in the past The Western Riverside County Regional Conservation Authority RCA acquires land for and manages the reserve This monograph examines the value of the land needed for the reserve the financial consequences of acquiring the land over different periods of time and the projected costs of operating the reserve It compares projected costs and revenues and identifies potential funding sources to fill any resulting funding gap It also examines the prospect for achieving the MSHCP s habitat conservation goals and whether the MSHCP has in fact streamlined the permitting processes Finally it identifies issues that the RCA Board of Directors RCA staff and stakeholders should address to ensure the plan s success and the ongoing economic and ecological health of the county Balancing Environment and Development in an Area of Rapid Urban Growth ,2008 The Western Riverside County Multiple Species Habitat Conservation Plan MSHCP is an ambitious effort to balance development and environmental concerns in an area of rapid urban growth In return for setting up a 500 000 acre conservation reserve the U S Fish and Wildlife Service and the California Department of Fish and Game granted the county and cities in western Riverside County a 75 year take permit for endangered species The take permit allows the cities and county to approve development projects outside the reserve that could negatively affect 146 sensitive plant and animal species The plan is supposed to speed the frequently time consuming and litigious process of permitting new highway and development projects while establishing an integrated conservation reserve rather than the patchwork of uncoordinated reserves that was so often the case in the past The Western Riverside County Regional Conservation Authority RCA acquires land for and manages the reserve This monograph examines the value of the land needed for the reserve the financial consequences of acquiring the land over different periods of time and the projected costs of operating the reserve It compares projected costs and revenues and identifies potential funding sources to fill any resulting funding gap It also examines the prospect for achieving the MSHCP s habitat conservation goals and whether the MSHCP has in fact streamlined the permitting processes Finally it identifies issues that the RCA Board of Directors RCA staff and stakeholders should address to ensure the plan s success and the ongoing economic and ecological health of the county Balancing urban development and endangered species Timothy Beatley,2000 The Sustainable Urban Development Reader Stephen M. Wheeler,Timothy Beatley,2004 Bringing together classic readings from a wide variety of sources this key book investigates how our cities and towns can become more sustainable Thirty eight selections span issues such as land use planning urban design transportation ecological restoration economic development resource use and equity planning Section introductions outline the major themes whilst the editors introductions to the individual writings explain their interest and significance to wider debates Additional sections present twenty four case studies of real world sustainable urban planning examples sustainability planning exercises and further reading Providing background in theory practical application and vision in a clear accessible format The Sustainable Urban Development Reader is an essential

Norman Johnson,Frederick Swanson,Margaret Herring,Sarah Greene,1999 In diverse regions around the country impending crises over dwindling natural resources and conflicts over land use have given birth to a new approach to environmental management and policymaking Known as bioregional assessment the approach gives science and scientists a crucial role in the policymaking process bringing together experts on a range of issues to assess existing ecological and social conditions and to provide a base of knowledge from which to develop policy options and management decisions A number of high profile assessments have been conducted and while much has been written on individual projects little has been done to compare assessments or integrate the lessons they provide Bioregional Assessments synthesizes the knowledge from many regions by examining the assessment process and detailing a series of case studies from around the country Each case study written by knowledgeable leaders from the region features a detailed description of the project followed by reviews from the perspectives of science management and policy Case studies examined are the Forest Ecosystem Management Assessment Team FEMAT Assessment the Great Lakes St Lawrence River Basin Assessments the Everglades South Florida Assessments the Northern Forest Lands Assessments Southern California Natural Community Conservation Planning NCCP the Interior Columbia Basin Ecosystem Management Project and the Sierra Nevada Ecosystem Project In addition the book features introductory chapters that examine the challenges inherent in the assessment of complex regional systems and the role of science in the assessment process The concluding chapter provides a synthesis and analysis of the assessment process Bioregional assessments are quickly becoming an essential part of ecosystem management This book provides a unique look at the theory and practice of bioregional assessments and is an essential volume for resource managers scientists policymakers and anyone involved with formulating or implementing strategies for regional planning and ecosystem management Urban Ecology John Marzluff, Eric Shulenberger, Wilfried Endlicher, Marina Alberti, Gordon Bradley, Clare Ryan, Craig ZumBrunnen, Ute Simon, 2008-01-03 Urban Ecology is a rapidly growing field of academic and practical significance Urban ecologists have published several conference proceedings and regularly contribute to the ecological architectural planning and geography literature However important papers in the field that set the foundation for the discipline and illustrate modern approaches from a variety of perspectives and regions of the world have not been collected in a single accessible book Foundations of Urban Ecology does this by reprinting important European and American publications filling gaps in the published literature with a few targeted original works and translating key works originally published in German This edited volume will provide students and professionals with a rich background in all facets of urban ecology The editors emphasize the drivers patterns processes and effects of human settlement The papers they synthesize provide readers with a broad understanding of the local and global aspects of settlement through traditional natural and social science lenses This interdisciplinary vision gives the reader a comprehensive view of the urban ecosystem by introducing drivers patterns processes and effects of human settlements and the relationships between humans and other animals plants ecosystem processes and abiotic conditions The reader learns how human institutions health and preferences influence and are influenced by the others members of their shared urban ecosystem Urban Wildlife Management, Second Edition Clark E. Adams, 2012-06-15 When the first edition of Urban Wildlife Management was published two years ago it provided conservationists ecologists and wildlife professionals with a welcome shift in the way that interactions between humans and wildlife were viewed and managed Instead of focusing on ways to evict or eradicate wildlife encroached on by urban development this unique work took a holistic ecosystems approach Gathering information from more than five hundred academic sources and the popular media this book educated us on the complete nature of the problem See what's new in the Second Edition New information garnered from secondary data sets Added contributions from an extended list of leading wildlife specialists Original research conducted by the authors and their students New chapters on urban soils urban waters and zoonotic diseases More perspective essays and case studies Single species profiles in each chapter that focus on management issues Numerous tables examining trends by species and by region Through discussions of past and present approaches in the United States the book explores the changing landscape of wildlife management and future approaches Urban habitats and hazards are defined in terms of green and gray spaces Sociopolitical issues are discussed in terms of wildlife management stakeholder responsibilities and legal considerations And wildlife are viewed as adaptive inhabitants of an evolving ecosystem rather than as interlopers in a humans only world The author maintains a blog exploring wildlife in our own backyard Department of the Interior and Related Agencies Appropriations for Fiscal Year 2002 United States.
