Habits of Mind Antonio T. De Nicolás, 2000 This stimulating new work is based on a highly successful and extremely popular course which Professor De Nicolas has taught at the State University of New York at Stony Brook for over 15 years In Habits of Mind De Nicolas reveals that the most important achievement of education is to develop in students those skills that enable them to participate fully in the life of humankind He calls these skills the inner technologies and intends by the phrase something very different from cognitive skills Education he claims must nurture the capacity for fantasy and imagination In Habits of Mind he traces the relative importance of these capacities through the history and philosophy of education from Plato onward The habits of intellectual discourse are treated as an organic thread from the ancient past to the present

Habits of Mind William Allen, 2017-09-20 Habits of Mind maintains that the fact that almost everyone now goes to college need not be seen as an obstacle to excellence in education Some critics have insisted that college is not for everyone but William B Allen and Carol Allen assert that the college diploma has rightly become as much the norm in this century as the high school diploma was during the twentieth century Accordingly it is essential that higher education remains true to its deepest purpose the cultivation of proficient humanity The authors see the key to this goal as the development of judgment or habits of mind Habits of mind are far and away the most influential determinants of human conduct and nowhere are they more profoundly shaped than in institutions of higher education Furthermore liberal education has proven most effective in this undertaking

The authors elaborate on the purpose of higher education and identify the chief obstacles to achieving its aim. They demonstrate the critical role of academic leaders in achieving the aim of higher education and posit that excellence in judgment is the primary characteristic of the academic leaders who fulfill this role. They examine three aspects of access to higher education: academic readiness, the cost and funding of higher education, and the capacity of the physical plant. Finally, they use policies developed in Virginia to demonstrate realistic approaches to achieving the aims of access and quality discussed throughout the book. The authors draw on their years of experience as practitioners in both private and public institutions: liberal arts colleges and research universities. This volume will be of interest to faculty and students in higher education programs, national and state public policymakers, legislative and academic leaders, and a general public concerned about the cost and value of a college education.

Learning and Leading with Habits of Mind Arthur L. Costa, Bena Kallick, 2008. Scientific and Religious Habits of Mind Ron Good, 2005. The open inquiring nature of science is fundamentally incompatible with the closed authoritarian nature of most religious training. Reasons for rejection of personal god concepts by Charles Darwin, Albert Einstein, and Bertrand Russell are used by this author to underline this incompatibility and to show how each of these important scientists came to reject organized religion. Conflicts between scientific and religious habits of mind are described, and ideas for education are offered. Common assumptions about our natural environment and human nature are shown to be obstacles to scientific literacy and to a sound liberal education. Research on the nature of the relationship between scientific and religious habits of mind is proposed, recognizing the potential incompatibilities between these important influences in society.

Fostering Habits of Mind in Today's Students Jennifer Fletcher, Adela Najjarro, Hetty Yelland, 2023-07-03. Co-published with and for students, they need more than just academic skills for success in college and career, and the lack of an explicit instructional focus on the soft skills critical to postsecondary success poses a challenge for many students who enter college especially the underprepared. Based upon a multi-campus cross-disciplinary collaboration, this book presents the resulting set of habits of mind-based strategies that demonstrably help not only low-income, ESL, and first-generation college students overcome obstacles on the path to degree completion; these strategies equally benefit all students. They promote life-long integrative learning and foster intellectual qualities such as curiosity, openness, flexibility, engagement, and persistence that are the key to developing internalized and transferrable competencies that are seldom given direct attention in college classrooms. This contributed volume, written with full-time and adjunct faculty in mind, provides the rationale for this pedagogical approach and presents the sequential instructional cycle that begins by identifying students assets and progressively focusing on specific habits to develop their capacity to transfer their learning to new tasks and situations Faculty from both two year and four year colleges provide examples of how they implement these practices in English math and General Education courses and demonstrate the applicability of these practices across course types and disciplines Chapters address key factors of college success including The link between habits of mind and student retention and achievement Using an assets based approach to teaching and learning Supporting and engaging students Creating inclusive learning communities Building confidence and self efficacy Promoting transfer of learning Teacher networks and cross disciplinary collaboration By foregrounding habits of mind as an instructional lens this book makes a unique contribution to teaching in developmental and general education settings
