Hakka Chinese Confront Protestant Christianity 1850 1900:

Hakka Chinese Confront Protestant Christianity, 1850-1900 Jessie G. Lutz, Rolland Ray Lutz, 1998-01-16 The Basil Society's China mission one of the more successful Protestant missions in the nineteenth century was distinguished by the fact that most of the initial proselytizing was conducted by Chinese converts in the interior rather than by Western missionaries in the treaty ports. Thus the first viable Protestant communities were not only established by Chinese evangelists they were established among an ethnic minority in south China the Hakka people. The autobiographies of eight pioneer Chinese missionaries featured in this book offer an unusual opportunity to view village life and customs in Guangdong during the mid nineteenth century by providing details on Hakka death and burial rituals ancestor veneration lineages and lineage feuds geomancy the status of Hakka women widespread economic hardship and civil disorder. They also illustrate the appeals of Christianity the obstacles to conversion and Chinese opposition to Christianity and Western missionaries. The authors' commentary addresses the issue of conversion which was fueled by individual desire for solace and salvation the building of a support community amid social chaos and the possibility of social mobility through education. Despite an expanding role by Western missionaries the Chinese origins the rural interior locale and the status of the Hakka as a disadvantaged minority contributed to successive generations of Christian families and to early progress toward an autonomous Hakka church.

Protestant Missionaries in China Jonathan A. Seitz, 2024-03-15 With a focus on Robert Morrison Protestant Missionaries in China evaluates the role of nineteenth century British missionaries in the early development of the cross cultural relationship between China and the English speaking world. As one of the first generation of British Protestant missionaries Robert Morrison went to China in 1807 with the goal of evangelizing the country. His mission pushed him into deeper engagement with Chinese language and culture and the exchange flowed both ways as Morrison a working class man whose firsthand experiences made him an accidental expert brought depictions of China back to eager British audiences. Author Jonathan A. Seitz proposes that despite the limitations imposed by the orientalism impulse of the era Morrison and his fellow missionaries were instrumental in creating a new map of cross cultural engagement that would evolve ultimately into modern sinology. Engaging and well researched Protestant Missionaries in China explores the impact of Morrison and his contemporaries on early sinology mission work and Chinese
