Chronophobia Pamela M. Lee,2006-02-17 An examination of the pervasive anxiety about and fixation with time seen in 1960s art In the 1960s art fell out of time both artists and critics lost their temporal bearings in response to what E M Cioran called not being entitled to time This anxiety and uneasiness about time which Pamela Lee calls chronophobia cut across movements media and genres and was figured in works ranging from kinetic sculptures to Andy Warhol films Despite its pervasiveness the subject of time and 1960s art has gone largely unexamined in historical accounts of the period Chronophobia is the first critical attempt to define this obsession and analyze it in relation to art and technology Lee discusses the chronophobia of art relative to the emergence of the Information Age in postwar culture The accompanying rapid technological transformations including the advent of computers and automation processes produced for many an acute sense of historical unknowing the seemingly accelerated pace of life began to outstrip any attempts to make sense of the present Lee sees the attitude of 1960s art to time as a historical prelude to our current fixation on time and speed within digital culture Reflecting upon the 1960s cultural anxiety about temporality she argues helps us historicize our current relation to technology and time After an introductory framing of terms Lee discusses such topics as presentness with respect to the interest in systems theory in 1960s art kinetic sculpture and new forms of global media the temporality of the body and the spatialization of the visual image in the paintings of Bridget Riley and the performance art of Carolee Schneemann Robert Smithson's interest in seriality and futurity considered in light of his reading of George Kubler's important work The Shape of Time Remarks on the History of Things and Norbert Wiener's discussion of cybernetics and the endless belaboring of the present in sixties art as seen in Warhol's Empire and the work of On Kawara

J.

Mander, 2020-05-18 W J Mander presents a history of metaphysics in nineteenth century Britain The story focuses on the elaboration of and differing reactions to the concept of the unknowable or unconditioned first developed by Sir William Hamilton in the 1829 The idea of an ultimate but unknowable way that things really are in themselves may be seen as supplying a narrative arc that runs right through the metaphysical systems of the period in question These thought schemes may be divided into three broad groups which were roughly consecutive in their emergence but also overlapping as they continued to develop In the first instance there were the doctrines of the agnostics who developed further Hamilton's basic idea that fundamental reality lies for the great part beyond our cognitive reach These philosophies were followed immediately by those of the empiricists and in the last third of the century the idealists both of these schools of thought albeit in profoundly different ways reacted against the epistemic pessimism of the agnostics Mander offers close textual readings of the main contributions to First Philosophy made by the key philosophers of the period such as Hamilton Mansel Spencer Mill and Bradley as well as some less well known figures such as Bain Clifford Shadworth Hodgson Ferrier and John Grote By presenting interpreting criticising and connecting together their various contrasting ideas this book explains how the three traditions developed and interacted with one another to comprise the history of metaphysics in Victorian Britain

Thomas Paine 1737-1809 was England's greatest revolutionary no other reformer was as actively involved in events of the scale of the American and French Revolutions and none wrote such best selling texts with the impact of Common Sense and

Rights of Man No one else combined the roles of activist and theorist or did so in the age of revolutions fundamental as it was to the emergence of the modern world But his fame meant that he was taken up and reinterpreted for current use by successive later commentators and politicians so that the historic Paine was too often obscured by the usable Paine J C D Clark explains Paine against a revised background of early and mid eighteenth century England He argues that Paine knew and learned less about events in America and France than was once thought He de attributes a number of publications and passages hitherto assumed to have been Paine s own and detaches him from a number of causes including anti slavery women s emancipation and class action with which he was once associated Paine s formerly obvious association with the early origin and long term triumph of natural rights republicanism and democracy needs to be rethought As a result Professor Clark offers a picture of radical and reforming movements as more indebted to the initiatives of large numbers of men and women in fast evolving situations than to the writings of a few individuals who framed lasting and eventually triumphant political discourses

Reminiscences of Prince Talleyrand Édouard Colmache, 1848

Unorthodox Ways to Think the City Teresa Stoppani, 2018-12-07 This book argues that architecture and the city and their processes can be better understood by drawing categories from disciplines that exceed the architectural and urban cultural context It performs an open intellectual reading that traverses architecture and architectural theory but also art theory and history cartography philosophy literature and cultural studies to unfold a series of figures that are ambiguously placed between the representation and the construction of space in architecture and the city The paradigm and philosophy the island and the city the map and representation the model and making and the questioning of form performed by dust are explored beyond their definition as processes that differently make space between architecture and the city and are proposed as unorthodox analytic techniques to decipher contemporary spatial complexity The book analyses how these figures have been employed at different times and in different creative disciplines beyond architecture and in relation to changing notions of space and traces the role that they have played in the shift towards the dynamic that has taken place in contemporary theory and design research What emerges is the idea of an architecture of the city that is not only physical but is largely defined by the way in which its physical spaces are regulated lived and perceived but also imagined and projected

The Economy of Salvation Luigino Bruni, 2019-03-11 This book provides a systematic commentary on the first two books of the Bible Genesis and Exodus Drawing on these two essential books it subsequently offers new readings of several issues relevant for today s economic and social life Western Humanism has its own founding cultural and symbolic codes One of them is the Bible which has for millennia provided a wealth of expressions on politics and love death and economy hope and doom Biblical stories have been revived and reinterpreted by hundreds of generations and have informed many of our most beautiful works of art not to mention the dreams of children and adults alike And they have given us hope during the many painful times of exile and oppression that we have gone through and are going through still Among the books of the Bible in both the Jewish and Christian traditions Genesis and Exodus represent the true foundation of biblical theology and anthropology but in them we also find the roots of the culture of markets money and commerce which would go on to flourish during the Middle Ages and ultimately form the spirit of capitalism Max Weber or the religion of capitalism Walter Benjamin in the modern era This book examines the Biblical foundations of our conception of social relations and offers new insights on the present economic and social discourse
