Fabian Essays in Socialism Bernard Shaw, Sydney

Olivier, Annie Wood Besant, Sidney Webb, William Clarke, 2014-02-03 An excerpt from the Economic Review Volume 1 THIS is a complete exposition of English Socialism in its latest maturest phase says Mr Sidney Webb Socialism in England p 38 If one of the cleverest contributors had not thus set his own estimate on the aim and value of the volume of essays a critic who should demand from it a complete and coherent manifesto of the New Socialism might fairly be held a little exacting I do not intend to press Mr Webb s ambitious description it would be a graceless and a barren task to employ a microscopic eye in the discovery of inconsistencies in the essays and between the essays of the individual writers I prefer to view the book as the outcome of a common wave of thought Quot homines tot sentent who would not shrink before the task of editing the contributions of seven keen and original minds One feels that something of compromise has entered into the collaboration that some of the writers at any rate would have said a good deal more if they had spoken out that the judicious editor has primed a little paradox and softened a little vehemence has endeavoured to make the work not only both popular and scientific but palatable to bourgeois prejudice withal Only very rarely once or twice in Mr Shaw s essays the lyrical note of the older revolutionary Socialism breaks out But for the most part there is nothing of savagery except the frontispiece of the popular edition and that is doubtless a typographical survival We must take the New Socialism at its own professions The older creed the pathetic and impatient belief in the immediate perfectibility of human nature and in the saving virtue of the purifying fires of revolutionary catastrophes has been tamed by experience Socialists Fabian Socialists at any rate are adopting historical methods This change of front is as striking as it is welcome showing as it does that the issues are no longer to be committed to the stronger arm but to the better argument Mr Webb has armed himself with a new weapon he has turned to the interpretation of the history of the last hundred years for comfort and encouragement We are all Socialists now said Sir William Harcourt in his haste Mr Webb insists on taking Sir William seriously Yet history may not turn out such a facile disciple as M Jourdain and Individualism or whatever may be the antithesis of Socialism is not quite driven from the field Mr Webb deals furiously with facts and figures but a sceptic might surely come through them unconvinced No array of facts however imposing is of much value unless it proves the conclusion at issue To take one of Mr Webb s strongest instances the State manages the Post Office because it is not desirable that postal services and consequently postal rates should be left to private competition because it is desirable that postal rates should be equitable rather than proportionate to the expense of transmission in each case because it is an undertaking which by its nature can be efficiently managed by a Government department In plain terms the State is motivated by the interests of the nation and by its own but not so far as I know by the desire to confer a benefit on its employees Does a municipality which takes over the town tramways act otherwise In other words is its action dictated by regard to consumers or to labourers Apply the same test to every other case

Mr Webb quotes to support his thesis What history in his hands proves is 1 that private competition is often disastrous 2 that a State regulation or State annexation of a particular branch of industry may under some circumstances be preferable 3 that in all these cases the State or subordinate governing body has held itself bound to consult the interest of the consumer
