Bernard Lightman, 2023-05-31 Scholars have tended to portray T H Huxley John Tyndall and their allies as the dominant cultural authority in the second half of the 19th century Defenders of Darwin and his theory of evolution these men of science are often seen as a potent force for the secularization of British intellectual and social life In this collection of essays Bernard Lightman argues that historians have exaggerated the power of scientific naturalism to undermine the role of religion in middle and late Victorian Britain The essays deal with the evolutionary naturalists especially the biologist Thomas Henry Huxley the physicist John Tyndall and the philosopher of evolution Herbert Spencer But they look also at those who criticized this influential group of elite intellectuals including aristocratic spokesman A J Balfour the novelist Samuel Butler and the popularizer of science Frank Buckland Focusing on the theme of the limitations of the cultural power of evolutionary naturalism the volume points to the enduring strength of religion in Britain in the latter half of the 19th century

Victorian Science in Context Bernard Lightman, 2008-07-31 Victorians were fascinated by the flood of strange new worlds that science was opening to them Exotic plants and animals poured into London from all corners of the Empire while revolutionary theories such as the radical idea that humans might be descended from apes drew crowds to heated debates Men and women of all social classes avidly collected scientific specimens for display in their homes and devoured literature about science and its practitioners Victorian Science in Context captures the essence of this fascination charting the many ways in which science influenced and was influenced by the larger Victorian culture Contributions from leading scholars in history literature and the history of science explore questions such as What did science mean to the Victorians For whom was Victorian science written What ideological messages did it convey The contributors show how practical concerns interacted with contextual issues to mold Victorian science which in turn shaped much of the relationship between modern science and culture Iconography in Cultural Studies Attila Kiss, 1996 Science in the Nursery Laurence
