M. Babkina, 2003 The term El Niño Spanish for the Christ Child was originally used by fishermen along the coasts of Ecuador and Peru to refer to a warm ocean current that typically appears around Christmastime and lasts for several months Fish are less abundant during these warm intervals yet in some years however the water is especially warm and the break in the fishing season persists into May or even June El Niño also brings heavy rains During the past 40 years nine El Niños have affected the South American coast Most of them raised water temperatures not only along the coast but also at the Galapagos islands and in a belt stretching 5000 miles across the equatorial Pacific The weaker events raised sea temperatures only by one to two degrees Fahrenheit but the strong ones like the El Niño of 1982-83 left an imprint not only upon the local weather and marine life but also on climatic conditions around the globe This book includes a detailed overview and bibliography with complete title author and subject indexes Encyclopedia of Environmental Change John A Matthews, 2013-12-13 Accessibly

Trade and Poverty Jeffrey G. Williamson, 2013-01-11 How the rise of globalization over the past two centuries helps explain the income gap between rich and poor countries today Today's wide economic gap between the postindustrial countries of the West and the poorer countries of the third world is not new Fifty years ago the world economic order two hundred years in the making was already characterized by a vast difference in per capita income between rich and poor countries and by the fact that poor countries exported commodities agricultural or mineral products while rich countries exported manufactured products In Trade and Poverty leading economic historian Jeffrey G Williamson traces the great divergence between the third world and the West to this nexus of trade commodity specialization and poverty Analyzing the role of specialization de industrialization and commodity price volatility with econometrics and case studies of India Ottoman Turkey and Mexico Williamson demonstrates why the close correlation between trade and poverty emerged Globalization and the great divergence were causally related and thus the rise of globalization over the past two centuries helps account for the income gap between rich and poor countries today

Modern Crises and Traditional Strategies Roy Ellen, 2007-07-01 The 1990s have seen a growing interest in the role of local ecological knowledge in the context of sustainable development and particularly in providing a set of responses to which populations may resort in times of political economic and environmental instability The period 1996 2003 in island southeast Asia represents a critical test case for understanding how this might work The key issues explored in this book are the creation erosion and transmission of ecological knowledge and hybridization between traditional and scientifically based knowledge amongst populations facing environmental stress e g 1997 El Ni o political conflict and economic hazards The book will also evaluate positive examples of how traditional knowledge has enabled local populations to cope with these kinds of insecurity      Environmental Change and Human Development Chris Barrow,2014-04-04 Environmental Change and Human Development focuses on environmental change and human fortunes While there is a large and rapidly expanding literature dealing with how people affect the environment less attention has been given in recent years to how the environment shapes human development In an ever more crowded world there is a need for anticipatory environmental management and a crucial input to this is consideration of the interaction between environment and humans The environment is not as stable benign or controllable as people like to think The world population is vastly larger than it has ever been and is still growing and humans increasingly upset nature through pollution and other activities While modern communications may help environmental managers rapid travel also increases the dispersal of diseases and pests Technological advance and social development is not all beneficial some innovations have the effect of making people more vulnerable to disruption by natural disaster and citizens are often less able to cope with changed conditions than people were in the past Environmental Change and Human Development addresses key issues such as soil degradation natural climatic variations and volcanic activity and provides geography and earth sciences students with an essential introduction to the major debates surrounding this topic      The Physical Geography of Southeast Asia Avijit Gupta,2005-02-24 The Physical Geography of Southeast Asia examines the complex mosaic of physical environments which comprise Southeast Asia and the current environmental problems and management practices which have arisen in this part of the world The book is in three sections The first section introduces the basic environmental components geology landforms rivers vegetation and others across the entire region The second section discusses specific environments that are characteristic of this assemblage of continental and maritime landscapes volcanic islands coastal environment granitic terrains karst etc The third and final section illustrates the ecological relationship between the environment and people volcanic hazards urban environment coastal zone development coral reefs and others The physical environment of Southeast Asia is examined at different levels covering a world region that ranges from ancient stable landmasses to dynamic unstable plate boundaries from aged primary rainforests to brash vibrant resource demanding built environments Southeast Asia has been perceived as a laboratory for studying plate tectonics It is an assemblage of large river basins peninsulas and archipelagos and seas surrounded by islands It is an area of great physical variations where parts of the physical environment have been significantly degraded anthropogenically following rapid population growth and development In large parts of the region the forms and processes on land and offshore should no longer be seen as entirely natural As this book repeatedly illustrates plate tectonics and people are both important contributors to the physical geography of Southeast Asia The contributors to this volume are distinguished scholars and have a long association with Southeast Asia The chapters are not only skilfully built on state of the art research findings but also include new material from the on going research activities of the authors The book goes beyond being the first comprehensive and detailed volume of the biophysical geography of Southeast Asia in that it also deals with the tropical environment and the relationship between environment and people in a rapidly developing world region      Australia, New Zealand, and the Pacific Donald S. Garden,2005-08-19 A fascinating study of the environmental history of Australia New Zealand and the islands of the Pacific from the time of the dinosaurs to the present day Of interest to students and academics alike this book provides a much needed synthesis of the recent literature on the environmental history of Australia and Oceania Part of ABC CLIO s Nature and Human Societies series this book maps out the key trends in the region s environmental history charting the creation of the Australian continent from the ancient land mass of Gondwanaland to the arrival of humans Especially fascinating are the chapters highlighting how successive waves of human migration created environmental havoc throughout the region leading to the collapse of the Easter Island civilization and the spread of nonindigenous flora and fauna From the controversies over the reasons why creatures such as the marsupial lion and the giant kangaroo became extinct to such contemporary problems as deforestation and global warming this book contains sobering lessons for us all      Modern Crises and Traditional Strategies R. F. Ellen,2007 The 1990s have seen a growing interest in the role of local ecological knowledge in the context of sustainable development and particularly in providing a set of responses to which populations may resort in times of political economic and environmental instability The period 1996 2003 in island southeast Asia represents a critical test case for understanding how this might work The key issues explored in this book are the creation erosion and transmission of ecological knowledge and hybridization between traditional and scientifically based knowledge amongst populations facing environmental stress e g 1997 El Ni o political conflict and economic hazards The book will also evaluate positive examples of how traditional knowledge has enabled local populations to cope with these kinds of insecurity      Developments in the Asian Rice Economy M. Beattie, 2011-05-25 A new interpretation of imperialism and environmental change and the anxieties imperialism generated through environmental transformation and interaction with unknown landscapes Tying together South Asia and Australasia this book demonstrates how environmental anxieties led to increasing state resource management conservation and urban reform      The Colonization of Unfamiliar Landscapes Marcy

Tracing Early Agriculture in the Highlands of New Guinea Tim Denham, 2018-06-28 In this book historical narratives chart how people created forms of agriculture in the highlands of New Guinea and how these practices were transformed through time The intention is twofold to clearly establish New Guinea as a region of early agricultural development and plant domestication and to develop a contingent practice based interpretation of early agriculture that has broader application to other regions of the world The multi disciplinary record from the highlands has the potential to challenge and change long held assumptions regarding early agriculture globally which are usually based on domestication Early agriculture in the highlands is charted by an exposition of the practices of plant exploitation and cultivation Practices are ontologically prior because they ultimately produce the phenotypic and genotypic changes in plant species characterised as domestication as well as the social and environmental transformations associated with agriculture They are also methodologically prior because they emplace plants in specific historico geographic contexts

Policy Making and Implementation Ronald James May, 2009-09-01 There is a vast literature on the principles of public administration and good governance and no shortage of theoreticians practitioners and donors eager to push for public sector reform especially in less developed countries Papua New Guinea has had its share of public sector reforms frequently under the influence of multinational agencies and aid donors Yet there seems to be a general consensus both within and outside Papua New Guinea that policy making and implementation have fallen short of expectations that there has been a failure to achieve good governance This volume which brings together a number of Papua New Guinean and Australian based scholars and practitioners with deep familiarity of policy making in Papua New Guinea examines the record of policy making and implementation in Papua New Guinea since independence It reviews the history of public sector reform in Papua New Guinea and provides case studies of policy making and implementation in a number of areas including the economy agriculture mineral development health education lands environment forestry decentralization law and order defence women and foreign affairs privatization and AIDS Policy is continuously evolving but this study documents the processes of policy making and implementation over a number of years with the hope that a better understanding of past successes and failures will contribute to improved governance in the future
