Andrea Pieroni, Lisa Price

From The Bush The Front Line Of Health Care In A Caribbean Village:

From the Bush Marsha B. Quinlan, 2004 This case study will be the first to deal with a topic in medical anthropology It explores the world of folk medicine in the Caribbean Dominica local beliefs and practices concerning how the body functions and malfunctions and the home remedies Dominicans use to cure common illnesses The case study goes beyond discussing the exotic medical system of a developing country which includes sorcery and folk illnesses to discuss how folk medicine flourishes in industrialized countries in a way that is little different than that practiced in Dominica The theme is that cultural ideas about the body and uses of medicinal plants are deeply intertwined Ideas about illness direct the consequent medical response The book s topic is important because knowledge of local ethnomedical practice is essential for development of public health interventions in non Western settings This realist ethnography is aimed at any member of the generally educated population ,

Anthropology Merrill Singer, Hans A. Baer, 2007 A new text in the growing field of medical anthropology

Ethnomedicine Pamela I. Erickson, 2007-11-14 People throughout time and place no matter their belief system have sought to discover causes and cures for illness and disease Among Westerners is a groundswell to augment biomedicine with holistic practices inherent in ethnomedicines of non Western traditions Yet missing are awareness and knowledge of the foundations and outgrowth of these alternative concepts Erickson fills this gap by clearly explaining the basic organizing principles that underlie all medical systems the full range of theories of disease causation the geographical distribution of medical practices and the historical trends that led to biomedical dominance Her efficient balanced approach highlights commonalities among the worlds vast and diverse medical systems making ethnomedicine easier to internalize and to apply in clinical settings Thieving a Chance Rebecca Prentice, 2015-05-15 When an IMF backed program of liberalization opened Trinidad s borders to foreign ready made apparel global competition damaged the local industry and unraveled worker entitlements and expectations but also presented new economic opportunities for engaging the global market This fascinating ethnography explores contemporary life in the Signature Fashions garment factory where the workers attempt to exploit gaps in these new labor configurations through illicit and informal uses of the factory a practice they colloquially refer to as thieving a chance Drawing on fifteen months of fieldwork author Rebecca Prentice combines a vivid picture of factory life first person accounts and anthropological analysis to explore how economic restructuring has been negotiated lived and recounted by women working in the garment industry during Trinidad s transition to a neoliberal economy Through careful social coordination the workers thief by copying patterns taking portions of fabric teaching themselves how to operate machines and wearing their work outside the factory Even so the workers describe their thieving as a personal individualistic enterprise rather than a form of collective resistance to workplace authority By making and taking furtive opportunities they embrace a vision of themselves as enterprising subjects while actively complying with the competitive demands of a neoliberal economic order Prentice presents the factory not as a stable institution but instead as a material and social space in which the projects plans and desires of workers and their employers become aligned and misaligned at some moments in deep harmony and at others in rancorous conflict Arguing for the productive power of the informal and illicit Thieving a Chance contributes to anthropological debates about the very nature of neoliberal capitalism and will be of great interest to undergraduate students graduate students and faculty in anthropology labor studies Caribbean studies and development studies

NAMED AN OUTSTANDING ACADEMIC TITLE OF 2024 BY CHOICE REVIEWS During the Potato Famine of the nineteenth century about one million Irish people perished from starvation and disease while more than two million fled the country in fear and desperation with some 850 000 landing in New York City After a difficult journey many found themselves impoverished taking dangerous jobs and battling miserable living conditions in an unfamiliar urban landscape These circumstances resulted in high rates of illness injury and death compared with other immigrant groups and native born

Americans In this profound study Meredith B Linn explores three kinds of afflictions typhus fever tuberculosis and work related injuries that disproportionately affected Irish immigrants tracing how existing medical ideas and technologies intersected with American prejudices to further conspire against this once culturally distinct group Linn makes a compelling case for how Americans interpretations of the visible bodily changes wrought by typhus fever and injuries contributed to essentializing and dehumanizing biases against these new immigrants while tuberculosis with its symptoms of fatigue pallor and emaciation enabled Americans to see individuals beyond stereotypes and to recognize the equal humanity of the Irish Drawing upon extensive archaeological records folkloric sources and historical documents Linn presents what she terms a visceral historical archaeology a perspective rooted in historical archaeology and medical anthropology to illuminate the experiences of these immigrants She investigates their health related ideas and practices and reveals their efforts to heal themselves using popular remedies from Ireland and several new American commodities Laden with heartrending stories from real working class Irish and their American doctors this richly illustrated book provides new perspectives about urban experience in the context of the Irish diaspora and invites contemplation about how illness injury and healing have affected the lives and reception of newcomers to the US Eating and Healing Andrea Pieroni, Lisa Price, 2006-03-15 Discover neglected wild food sources that can also be used as medicine The long standing notion of food as medicine medicine as food can be traced back to Hippocrates Eating and Healing Traditional Food As Medicine is a global overview of wild and semi domesticated foods and their use as medicine in traditional s Im/Tb Cult Anthropology Gary Ferraro, 2005-04 Wild Harvest in the Heartland Justin M. Nolan, 2007-05-30 This work is a detailed study of people and plants in Little Dixie a seven county region of central Missouri Based on three summers of field research Professor Nolan combines ethnoscience with folklore to document what and why people know about wild plants in this little known section of the American Midwest The book is organized around the cognitive and behavioral differences between local experts and novices who gather wild plant foods and medicines regularly throughout the seasons in Little Dixie Ethnobotanical knowledge is described as an ongoing interaction between ecology and cognition under constant modification by shifting cultural beliefs about edibility efficacy and sensory appeal As consumable resources and symbols of belonging wild plants are detailed with ethnographic context and vivid pen and ink sketches Wild Harvest in the Heartland will appeal to a broad audience of anthropologists ethnobotanists folklorists and ecologists and will provide a welcome resource for naturalists conservationists and outdoor enthusiasts
