

The Five Phases of the Fur Trade

Phase 1: The British and French both fished off the east coast of Canada. There, they met the Mi'kmaq people and started trading with them.

Phase 2: The French established New France and they traded with the First Nations around the great lakes and St. Lawrence River.

Phase 3: Britain set up the Hudson's Bay Company (HBC). New Britain and France were both competing for the fur trade.

Phase 4: The North West Company (NWC) took over the French fur trade. Both the HBC and the NWC were competing, and moved west where the supply of beavers was greater.

Phase 5: Britain got the HBC and the NWC to merge into the RBC, which traded across Canada.
