Voyages of Samuel de Champlain (Complete) Samuel de Champlain, Champlain was descended from an ancestry whose names are not recorded among the renowned families of France He was the son of

Antoine de Champlain a captain in the marine and his wife Marguerite LeRoy They lived in the little village of Brouage in the ancient province of Saintonge Of their son Samuel no contemporaneous record is known to exist indicating either the day or year of his birth The period at which we find him engaged in active and responsible duties such as are usually assigned to mature manhood leads to the conjecture that he was born about the year 1567 Of his youth little is known The forces that contributed to the formation of his character are mostly to be inferred from the abode of his early years the occupations of those by whom he was surrounded and the temper and spirit of the times in which he lived Brouage is situated in a low marshy region on the southern bank of an inlet or arm of the sea on the southwestern shores of France opposite to that part of the Island of Oleron where it is separated from the mainland only by a narrow channel Although this little town can boast a great antiquity it never at any time had a large population It is mentioned by local historians as early as the middle of the eleventh century It was a seigniorship of the family of Pons The village was founded by Jacques de Pons after whose proper name it was for a time called Jacopolis but soon resumed its ancient appellation of Brouage An old chronicler of the sixteenth century informs us that in his time it was a port of great importance and the theatre of a large foreign commerce Its harbor capable of receiving large ships was excellent regarded indeed as the finest in the kingdom of France It was a favorite idea of Charles VIII to have at all times several war ships in this harbor ready against any sudden invasion of this part of the coast At the period of Champlain's boyhood the village of Brouage had two absorbing interests First it had then recently become a military post of importance and second it was the centre of a large manufacture of salt To these two interests the whole population gave their thoughts their energy and their enterprise
