Weathering the Storm P. Boomgaard, 2021-10-01 The principal cause of the 1930s depression in Southeast Asia lay outside the region through a sharp contraction in demand for the region's major commodity exports But it had important internal causes too an oversupply of primary commodities and an increasing scarcity of new agricultural land leading to higher rents and lower wages rising indebtedness and increasing landlessness This work thoroughly analyses the pre war depression It also looks at the changes in the basic structures of the economies of Southeast Asia that were of long term importance such as the role of the state in the economy The authors also draw similarities and

White, 2016-03-03 This book reconsiders the nature and formation of Asia s economic order during the 1930s and 1950s in light of the new historiographical developments in Britain and Japan Recently several Japanese economic historians have offered a new perspective on Asian history arguing that economic growth was fuelled by the phenomenon of intra Asian trade which began to grow rapidly around the turn of the 19th 20th centuries On the other side British imperial historians P J Cain and A G Hopkins have presented their own interpretation of gentlemanly capitalism in which they emphasize the leading role of the service sector rather than that of British industry in assessing the nature of the British presence overseas In order to assess and test these new perspectives this volume addresses three key issues The first is to reconsider the metropolitan peripheral relationship in Asia focusing particularly on the role of the sterling area and its implications for Asian economic development The second is to examine the formation of inter regional trade relations within Asia in the 1930s and their revival and transformation in the 1950s The final issue is the comparison of the international order of Asia of the 1930s with the 1950s and the degree to which the Second World War represented a break point in Asia s
