Politics and Ideology in Canada Michael Ornstein, Michael Stevenson, 2003-02-18 Winner of the Harold Adams Innis Prize Politics and Ideology in Canada examines a period of crucial historical change in Canada beginning in the mid 1970s when the crisis of the Keynesian welfare state precipitated a transition to a new political order based on the progressive downsizing of state involvement in the economy and society Using class and ideology as key concepts Michael Ornstein and Michael Stevenson examine this transition in terms of the nature of hegemony and hegemonic crisis and the conditions of political order and instability These concepts guide the interpretation of three large surveys of representative samples of the Canadian public and two unique elite surveys conducted between 1975 and 1981 The surveys cover an exceptionally broad spectrum of political issues including social programs civil and economic rights economic policy foreign ownership labour relations and language issues and sovereignty A wide ranging analysis of public and elite attitudes reveals a hegemonic order through the early 1980s built around public support for the institutions of the Canadian welfare state But there was also widespread public alienation from politics Public opinion was quite strongly linked to class but not to party politics Regional variation in political ideology on a broad range of issues was less pronounced than differences between Quebec and English Canada Much deeper ideological divisions separated the elites with a dramatic polarization between corporate and labour respondents State elites fell between these two though generally more favourable to capital The responses of the business elites reveal the ideological roots of the Mulroney years in support for cuts in social programs free trade privatization and deregulation

Energy Policy Modeling: United States and Canadian Experiences William T. Ziemba,S.L. Schwartz,2012-12-06 Alex Cowie As the twentieth century draws to a close one of our greatest problems is the availability of energy One way to study the energy problem is to resolve it into four areas energy demand energy sources transportation of energy from sources to demand centers and the optimal allocation of energy forms to demands Each of these areas is extremely complex by itself When efforts are made to tie them together for example to produce a National Policy the complexities are compounded Another way to study the energy problem because of its political and social consequences is to resolve it into geographical areas Individual provinces of Canada or states of the United States will have their concerns about energy within their geographical boundaries As producer consumer or both each wants to ensure an energy development program which will work to the maximum benefit of its citizens Similarly countries endeavor to protect their citizens and undertake energy policies that will assure either a continuation of the existing quality of life or particularly in the case of Third World countries a marked improvement in quality of life These competing and conflicting goals call for a study which encompasses the whole world Again complexity is piled upon complexity If the problem is not yet sufficiently complex there is an equally complex question of the effect of energy production and use on the ecology
