James I. Clark

Farming The Cutover A Social History Of Northern Wisconsin 1900 194:

Farming the Cutover Robert J. Gough, 1997 Farming the Cutover describes the visions and accomplishments of these settlers from their perspective. People of the cutover managed to forge lives relatively independent of market pressures and for this they were characterized as backward by outsiders and their part of the state was seen as a hideout for organized crime figures. State and federal planners, county agents and agriculture professors eventually determined that the cutover could be engineered by professional and academic expertise into a Progressive social model and the lives of its inhabitants improved. By 1940 they had begun to implement public policies that discouraged farming and they eventually decided that the region should be depopulated and the forests replanted. By exploring the history of an eighteen county region, Robert Gough illustrates the travails of farming in marginal areas. He juxtaposes the social history of the farmers with the opinions and programs of the experts who sought to improve the region. Significantly, what occurred in the Wisconsin cutover anticipated the sweeping changes that transformed American agriculture after World War II.

The Countryside in the Age of the Modern State Catherine McNicol Stock, Robert D. Johnston, 2001. This book moves rural history into explorations of modern politics, diverse rural peoples and their complex relationships to the American state in the twentieth century.

Hinterland Dreams Eric J. Morser, 2011-11-29. In the 1840s La Crosse, Wisconsin, was barely more than a trading post nestled on the banks of the Mississippi River. But by 1900 the sleepy frontier town had become a thriving city. Hinterland Dreams tracks the growth of this community and shows that government institutions and policies were as important as landscapes and urban boosters in determining the small Midwestern city's success. The businessmen and women of La Crosse worked hard to attract government support during the nineteenth century. Federal, state and municipal officials passed laws, issued rulings, provided resources, vested aldermen with financial and regulatory power and created a lasting legal foundation that transformed the city and its economy. As historian Eric J. Morser demonstrates, the development of La Crosse and other small cities linked rural people to the wider world and provided large cities like Chicago with the lumber and other raw materials needed to grow even larger. He emphasizes the role of these municipalities as well as their relationship to all levels of government in the life of an industrializing nation. Punctuated with intriguing portraits of La Crosse's early citizens, Hinterland Dreams suggests a new way to understand the Midwest's urban past, one that has its roots in the small but vibrant cities that dotted the landscape. By mapping the richly textured political economy of La Crosse before 1900, the book highlights how the American state provided hinterland Midwesterners with potent tools to build cities and help define their region's history in profound and lasting ways.

North Woods River Eileen M. McMahon, Theodore J. Karamanski, 2009-10-20. The St. Croix River, the free-flowing boundary between Wisconsin and Minnesota, is a federally protected National Scenic Riverway. The area's first recorded human inhabitants were the Dakota Indians, whose lands were transformed by fur trade empires and the loggers who called it the river of pine. A patchwork of farms cultivated by immigrants from many countries followed the cutover forests Today the St Croix River Valley is a tourist haven in the land of sky blue waters and a peaceful escape for residents of the bustling Minneapolis St Paul metropolitan region North Woods River is a thoughtful biography of the river over the course of more than three hundred years Eileen McMahon and Theodore Karamanski track the river's social and environmental transformation as newcomers changed the river basin and in turn were changed by it The history of the St Croix revealed here offers larger lessons about the future management of beautiful and fragile wild waters

Framing the Cutover James I. Clark,2017-10-28 Excerpt from Framing the Cutover The Settlement of Northern Wisconsin Ed L Peet in his Grantsburg Journal of Burnett County had objected to reforestation as early as 1903 Ten years later two Rhinelander papers the News and the New North led the attack on Griffith and his ideas Newspapers of other northern counties joined in and the debate pro and con forestry and agriculture became quite general In February 1912 the New North prefaced an anti forestry letter with It is gratifying to know that the people of Rhinelander are even at this late day awakening to the need of developing agricultural resources of Oneida County The letter writer claimed the soil was rich and excellent for farming He pointed out that state owned forest reserves reduced local tax income Counties should elect representatives to the legislature who would insist on selling the land to settlers About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction
