Farming In Prehistory:

The Agricultural Revolution in Prehistory Graeme Barker, 2006-10-05 This book addresses one of the most debated and least understood revolutions in the history of our species the change from foraging hunting and gathering to farming Ten thousand years ago there were few if any communities whom we can properly call farmers five thousand years later large numbers of the world's population were farmers using a wide variety of crops and animals in different combinations in different regions The possible reasons for the transition have long been one of the most controversial topics in archaeology and continue to be so The author integrates a massive array of information from archaeology including archaeological approaches right across the humanities and science spectrum together with many other disciplines including anthropology botany climatology genetics linguistics and zoology Against current orthodoxy he develops a strong case for the parallel development of geographically specific agricultural systems in many areas of the world transformations in the lifeways of forager societies that in some cases have origins reaching much further back in time than commonly suggested He argues that the change from foraging to farming was as much about foragers developing new ways of thinking about their relationship to the world they inhabited as about new ways of obtaining food Farming in Prehistory Barbara Bender, 1977

Prehistoric Farming in Europe Graeme Barker, 1985-07-11 Drawing upon his own extensive knowledge of European archaeology Graeme Barker has impressively integrated the full range of archaeological data to produce in this book a masterly account of prehistoric farming in Europe on a unique scale He makes use of modern archaeological techniques to reconstruct the lives of prehistoric farmers in remarkable detail Not only do we now have a vivid picture of the prehistoric farmyard but we know what animals were kept how they were fed and why they were bred Evidence for crops grown and techniques of cultivation and husbandry helps recreate the prehistoric landscape Even the social organisation that determined the use of resources and provided the crucial stimulus for agricultural change can be relived Graeme Barker develops his argument through analogies with the agricultural history of classical and medieval Europe and concludes that today's industrial farmers can learn much from the successes and failures of early European farming Last Hunters, First Farmers Theron Douglas Price, Anne Birgitte Gebauer, 1995 During virtually the entire four million year history of our habitation on this planet humans have been hunters and gatherers dependent for nourishment on the availability of wild plants and animals Beginning about 10 000 years ago however the most remarkable phenomenon in the course of human prehistory was set in motion At locations around the world over a period of about 5 000 years hunters became farmers Far more than the domestication of plant and animal species was involved in this revolution which was accompanied by massive changes in the structure and organization of the societies that adopted agriculture and by a totally new relationship with the environment Whereas hunter gatherers live off the land in an extensive fashion exploiting a diversity of resources over a broad area farmers utilize the landscape intensively The implications of these changes in human activity and social organization reverberate down to the present day The case studies presented here ranging from the Far East to the American Southwest provide a global perspective on contemporary research into the origins of agriculture Downplaying more traditional explanations of the turn to agriculture such as the influence of marginal environments and population pressures the contributors to this volume emphasize instead the importance of the resource rich areas in which agriculture began the complex social organizations already in place the role of sedentism and in some locales the advent of economic intensification and competition This volume resulted from an advanced seminar held at the School of American Research in Santa Fe New Mexico Contributors include Ofer Bar Yosef Anne Birgitte Gebauer Charles Higham Lawrence H Keeley Richard H Meadow Deborah M Pearsall T Douglas Price Bruce D Smith Patty Jo Watson and W H Wills Farming Practice in British Prehistory Roger Mercer, Roger J. Simulating Transitions to Agriculture in Prehistory Salvador Pardo-Gordó, Sean Bergin, 2022-01-24 This book highlights new and innovative approaches to archaeological research using computational modeling while focusing on the Neolithic transition around the world The transformative effect of the spread and adoption of agriculture in prehistory cannot be overstated Consequently archaeologists have often focused their research on this transition hoping to understand both the ecological causes and impacts of this shift as well as the social motivations and constraints involved Given the complex interplay of socio ecological factors the answers to these types of questions cannot be found using traditional archaeological methods alone Computational modeling techniques have emerged as an effective approach for better understanding prehistoric data sets and the linkages between social and ecological factors at play during periods of subsistence change Such techniques include agent based modeling Bayesian modeling GIS modeling of the prehistoric environment and the modeling of small scale agriculture As more archaeological data sets aggregate regarding the transition to agriculture researchers are often left with few ways to relate these sets to one another Computational modeling techniques such as those described above represent a critical next step in providing archaeological analyses that are important for understanding human prehistory around the world Given its scope this book will appeal to the many interdisciplinary scientists and researchers whose work involves archaeology and computational social science Chapter The Spread of Agriculture Quantitative Laws in Prehistory is available open access under a Creative Commons Attribution 4.0 International License via springer.com Transitions to Agriculture in Prehistory Anne Birgitte Gebauer, Theron Douglas Price, 1992 Uebergang zur Landwirtschaft Pr. historie Wirtschaftsgeschichte The Farming of Prehistoric Britain P. Food and Farming in Prehistoric Britain Paul Elliott, 2017-03-13 From spit roasting pig to hanging cream cheese from the rafters from baking roast pork under the ground in pits to cooking trout on wicker frames over an open fire cooking techniques in prehistoric Britain are ingenious and revealing There were no ovens and many vegetables and breeds of animal familiar to us today had not yet arrived In reconstructing some of these techniques and recipes the author has discovered a different world with a completely different approach to food This is native cuisine cooked in a manner that persisted through the Neolithic Bronze and Iron Ages This book first tells the story of prehistoric settlement and moves on to explore the hunting and foraging techniques of the Mesolithic After discussing the way in which the Britons farmed and what they grew the book moves into the roundhouse and the tools and utensils available

The final half of the book examines the varied techniques used from covering fish in clay to baking meat underground spit roasting brewing mead boiling water with hot stones and so on All the techniques have been carried out by the author

John Collis, Franco Nicolis, Mark Pearce, 2017-08 Summer farms occur throughout the world where there are rich pastures that can only be utilised for part of the year mainly because they are under snow and ice during the winter In Europe transhumance is often a major event when the cattle and other livestock leave their home villages and move up into the mountains and likewise on their return The best known sites in Europe are perhaps those found in the Alpine areas but they occur everywhere where there are suitable highland areas to exploit Traditionally they have been the subject of the studies of ethnographers and anthropologists especially in the second half of the 20th century when technological and economic changes led to the gradual abandonment of the farms and to other ways of exploiting the highlands The last of these farmers are gradually disappearing and with them the oral records and memories Now it is archaeologists who are leading the recording of this material and also looking at the history of such farming from prehistory and from the Bronze Age with the rise in importance of Secondary Products such as cheese which could be stored for use over winter Much of the evidence can only be gathered by surface survey and by excavation though in some cases there are good written sources which have yet to be fully exploited This volume provides case studies as well as brief summaries of other projects in Europe extending from the Black Sea in the east to northern Spain and Iceland in the west though with a concentration on the Alpine area One thing that emerges is the very varied nature of these sites in terms of their chronology who went to the farms the distances travelled and the other activities associated with transhumance such as mining In some cases the products were primarily for the subsistence of the agricultural population but in other cases they were traded and could produce a large amount of profit This is the first overview of these sites in Europe written from an archaeological point of view
