Farm Forestry In South Asia:

Farm Forestry in South Asia N. C. Saxena, Vishwa Ballabh, 1995 Farm Forestry in South Asia N C Saxena, Vishwa Ballabh, 1995-11-03 Why do farmers plant and protect trees This is the central question addressed in this volume Taking 14 case studies from diverse ecological regions of South Asia two major issues are discussed traditional agroforestry patterns and the response of farmers to the farm forestry programme Using empirical data to analyze critically existing theories relating to farm forestry the contributors highlight the importance of taking the practical perspective of the farmers themselves and developing an integrative approach Farm Forestry in India S. Puttaswamaiah, 2009 Contents Preface 1 Introduction 2 Profile of the study Region and Sample Households 3 Cropping Pattern and Eucalyptus Yields 4 Costs and Returns from Eucalyptus and Ragi Cultivation 5 Economic Viability of Eucalyptus 6 Labour Use and Income 7 Marketing and Price Received for Eucalyptus 8 Environmental Aspects of Eucalyptus Cultivation 9 Summary and Conclusions This Book deals with issues of efficient utilization of natural resources land and trees particularly in dry land areas Government of India implemented the farm Forestry Programme a component of social Forestry Programme since 1980 to involve farms in tree plantation activities Farm Forestry Programme was defined as the practice of forestry in all its aspects on farm or village land generally integrated with other farm operation It is a programme of planting of trees on bunds and boundaries of the fields of farmers and to be taken up by the farmers themselves The Programme persuaded farmers to grow trees on farmlands farm bunds and particularly in environmentally fragile areas by distributing various tree species which attracted large numbers of farmers in several states considering the widespread adoption of the farm forestry programme by farmers particularly in Karnataka this study has examined the development of social and Farm Forestry in India assessed the economics of tree crops cultivated on farm vis a vis annual crops by using rigorous project appraisal techniques and other analytical tools examined labour utilization and income generation marketing aspects and also environmental issues raised against certain tree species such as eucalyptus planted by farmers Economic and environmental analysis of tree cultivation by farmers illustrated the profitability and other benefits accrued by farmers The Study suggests for promoting afforestation activities for efficient use and management of land and tree resources The study will be useful for researchers policy makers and practitioners Dr S Puttaswamaiah is Lecturer in the Department of Economics Bangalore University Bangalore Having specialized in Environmental Economics his areas of research interest include agricultural economics health economics public economics and development economics He has carried out different research studies in the above areas while previously working in research institutes He has published several research articles and contributed for state of Environment Report Karnataka and Karnataka Development Report Agroforestry - The Future of Global Land Use P.K. Ramachandran Nair, Dennis Garrity, 2012-08-22 This volume contains a solid body of the current state of knowledge on the various themes and activities in agroforestry worldwide It is organized into three sections the Introduction section consists of the summaries of six keynote speeches at the 2nd World Congress of Agroforestry held in Nairobi Kenya in 2009 that is followed by two sections of peer reviewed thematic chapters grouped as Global Perspectives seven chapters and Regional Perspectives eleven chapters authored by professional leaders in their respective agroforestry related fields worldwide A total of 130 professionals from institutions in 33 countries in both developing and the industrialized temperate regions of the world contributed to the book as chapter authors and or reviewers Thus the book presents a comprehensive and authoritative account of the global picture of agroforestry today

New Vistas in Agroforestry P. K. Ramachandran Nair, M.R. Rao, L.E. Buck, 2013-03-09 It was in late 2002 that the idea of preparing a collection of multi authored chapters on different aspects of agroforestry as a compendium for the 1 World Congress of Agroforestry June 2004 was tossed around With the approval of the idea by the Congress Organizing Committee serious efforts to make it a reality got under way in early 2003 The rigorously peer reviewed and edited manuscripts were submitted to the publisher in December 2003 Considering the many different individuals involved in the task as authors and manuscript reviewers we feel quite pleased that the task could be accomplished within this timeframe We are pleased also about the contents on several counts First of all the tropical temperate mix of topics is a rare feature of a publication of this nature In spite of the scientific commonalities between tropical and temperate practices of agroforestry the differences between them are so enormous that it is often impossible to mesh them together in one publication Secondly several of the chapters are on topics that have not been discussed or described much in agroforestry literature A third feature is that some of the authors though well known in their own disciplinary areas are somewhat new to agroforestry the perceptions and outlooks of these scholars who are relatively uninfluenced by the past happenings in agroforestry gives a whole new dimension to agroforestry and broadens the scope of the subject Finally rather than just reviewing and summarizing past work most chapters take the extra effort in attempting to outline the next steps

Seenivasan,2017-02-01 Agroforestry Systems in India: Livelihood Security & Ecosystem Services Jagdish Chander Dagar,Anil Kumar Singh,Ayyanadar Arunachalam,2013-11-26 Agroforestry the word coined in early seventies has made its place in all the developed and the developing countries of the world and is now recognized as an important approach to ensuring food security and rebuilding resilient rural environments India has been an all time leader in agroforestry The South and Southeast Asia region comprising India is often described as the cradle of agroforestry Almost all forms of agroforestry systems exist across India in ecozones ranging from humid tropical lowlands to high altitude and temperate biomes and perhumid rainforest zones to parched drylands The country ranks foremost among the community of nations not only in terms of this enormous diversity and long tradition of the practice of agroforestry but also in fostering scientific developments in the subject Agroforestry applies to private agricultural and forest lands and communities that also include highly erodible flood prone economically marginal and environmentally sensitive lands The typical situation is agricultural where trees are added to create desired benefits Agroforestry allows for the diversification of farm activities and makes better use of environmental resources Owing to an increase in the population of human and cattle there is increasing demand of food as well as fodder particularly in developing countries like India So far there is no policy that deals with specifics in agroforestry in India But the Indian Council of Agricultural Research has been discussing on the scope of having a National Agroforestry Policy in appropriate platforms However evolving a policy requires good and reliable datasets from different corners of the country on the subject matter This synthesis volume containing 13 chapters is an attempt to collate available information in a classified manner into different system ecologies problems and solutions and converging them into a policy support
